RUNKEL COAT OF ARMS.

The Arms of the Lords of Runkel, shown on the opposite page, are, in a shield of silver, two red pales and in the upper left corner (looking at shield) a blue square; the crest is a silver battlemented tower; the lambrequins are of red and silver.

The Arms of the Princes of Wied are very elaborate. The twelve-quartered shield of the present family has in its second quartering a silver tower on a blue field for Runkel, and in its third and tenth quarterings the shield of Runkel; the remaining quarterings are for Wied, Lower Isenburg, Sayn, Neuerburg, and Kirchberg.

As our interest is principally connected with the Arms of the Runkels, no illustration of the wonderfully involved Arms of the Wieds is given.

EXPLANATIONS.

Where letters or other abbreviations are used their significance is as follows: b., born; d., died; dec'd, deceased; m., married; unm., unmarried. The general abbreviations for the months and the names of the different states are so well known that explanation as to them is unnecessary.

In working out this genealogy, our record of the New Jersey family being practically complete, we have used for it the New England method; i. e., to each member of the family has been given a number. In doing this we use two sets of numerals; the Arabic, to indicate their position in the line; the Roman, the order of their birth or position in the family. Except number one, each of the Arabic numerals appears in the inner margin in connection with the ancestor in the outer. Each in turn is then brought to the outer margin, and his or her children appear in the inner. Where the name is Runkle, only the Christian name is given. Names of descendants from female branches are given in full and in smaller type.

The method used for showing descent in the other and less complete lines is by designating the emigrant, or earliest known ancestor, by the Roman numeral I., his children by the Arabic numerals 1, 2, etc., his grandchildren by the same in parenthesis (1), (2), etc., his great-grandchildren by letters a, b, c, etc., their children by a 1, a 2, b 1, b 2, etc. Here also only the Christian name is given of those in direct male line, while the full name is given and in smaller type of the descendants from female branches.

PREFACE.

The individual who has written up this genealogy of the Runkles was moved to its undertaking simply through a desire to see collected and preserved in some durable form such facts and data relative to the family as seemed likely to become forever lost through the passing away of its older members.

With very few exceptions, he has received, from those to whom he has applied for information, none but the kindest treatment and most hearty co-operation; and, as he has very freely made use of the results, from their researches, of their suggestions and writings, without a hint at a quotation or acknowledgment, he would now ease his conscience by freely confessing that whatever of excellence may be found in his work is entirely due to those who have so freely and so willingly assisted him.

That which he has given concerning the European family has been very largely taken from a "History of the Earls of Isenburg, Runkel, and Wied," published in 1825 by T. St. Reck, evangelical pastor at Neuwied, who prepared his work under the patronage of the then Prince of Wied. This now very rare book was most generously presented to the writer by Mr. John C. Runkle of Paris, France, through whom, also, he received a full and remarkably clear translation of those parts therein relating to the Runkels, most kindly made by the Countess de Laune of the same city. To Mr. Runkle the writer is likewise indebted for researches which, through his generous instigation, were earnestly but unsuccessfully made among the archives of the House of Wied and by different agents, in church records, etc., in Germany, for that elusive link necessary to connect the Old World Runkels with the Runkles of the New.

Much valuable material concerning the family in Europe and many suggestions of the greatest assistance have also been received from Mr. E. V. S. Besson, of Hoboken, N. J., nearly all of which the writer has with the utmost freedom appropriated.

In his preparation of the material concerning the American Runkles, so many have, by their great kindness, encouragement, and assistance, placed the writer under obligations to them that he feels utterly unable to select, without unjust discrimination, those to whom it might be proper and fitting for him to make some special acknowledgment. His failure to do so, therefore, is from no lack of appreciation on his part.

The data contained in this genealogy were from necessity almost entirely obtained through correspondence. The writer has, however, taken every precaution to insure the correctness of his work, both by verifying, where possible, the information he has received and by giving the subject-matter throughout its preparation his most careful and painstaking attention. He has done his best.

With the above acknowledgments and explanations the writer, compiler, or whatever you may choose to call him, begs leave to submit this work to the tender inspection of its actual authors, the American Runkles.

CASTLE OF RUNKEL,

ON THE LAHN, GERMANY.

THE RUNKLE FAMILY.

THE CASTLE OF RUNKEL.

In north-central Germany, in the Prussian Province of Hesse-Nassau, winding its way through scenes of romantic and ever-varying beauty, flows the River Lahn. In ascending the stream from its entrance into the Rhine, at almost every turn is seen some beautiful little city, village, or hamlet nestled under the protection of the sheltering hills; while, on the mountains in the background, there often stands, visible above the trees, some large castle or majestic ruin. How eloquently do these crumbling walls of feudal strongholds speak of the past ages! The days of their power, however, are gone, never to return, and the once mighty fortresses for oppression or protection now serve only to add a peculiar interest to the beauty which they crown and to form the center of many a touching legend, of many a tale of arms.

But a few miles from the mouth of the river and on both sides of the stream, which is there spanned by several bridges, is situated quite a celebrated and certainly a beautiful little watering-place by the name of Bad Ems (Bath Ems). Taking a position on the mountains frowning over it, we can look right down into the town; then, as our gaze wanders beyond and up the valley, the small river through its center appears to us like a ribbon growing narrower and narrower until lost between the far distant hills. Along the banks of the stream, the white houses and church spires of cities and villages, the dark green of near-by mountains succeeded by hills of lighter shade and the blue, far-away mountains on the horizon, present a picture of unrivaled loveliness.

A short distance beyond Bad Ems is Bad Nassau, near which, on an isolated hill, stands, like a grim and silent sentinel, an old castle; still further, and Laurenburg, an important mining place, with its immense ore banks, comes into view. We then, on a wooded height, far off from the river to the right, see Schloss Schaumburg, and nearer the river soon appear the crumbling, vine-clad ruins of Baldwinstein. Later Oranienburg is passed, and there ahead are the cathedral spires of Limburg. This city, beautiful despite the associations connected with its name, is soon left behind, and ere long, perched on a rocky eminence almost overhanging the river, the gray walls and large square towers of a very ancient and partly ruined castle of great extent suddenly loom into view. This castle is Runkel. Imposing and venerable in appearance, the old fortress home of the Lords of Runkel begins to show the impress of the centuries which have passed over it. The castle is situated on the left bank of the river Lahn, distant about four miles above Limburg. It was built about A. D. 1059, and in time, under its shelter and protection, a little settlement was formed. This was originally surrounded by a wall; but outgrowing its narrow confines it in time broadened out, crossed the stream, and became the Burg of Runkel; taking its name, no doubt—as was the custom of the age—from the castle to which it looked for aid in time of trouble. The town now has a population of about eleven hundred inhabitants. Stretched across the stream, in front of this massive pile, is an ancient bridge, built for easy communication with the Castle of Schadeck, erected and owned by a cousin of one of the early Lords of Runkel, who, upon the separation of the Lordships of Westerburg and Runkel, became the head of the House of Westerburg.

The Lords of Runkel were, as demanded by the custom of the Middle Ages, brought up to the profession of arms. They were a war-like race, and many a foray did they lead from their fortress against their neighbors. Not unfrequently also, after a disastrous defeat, behind these massive walls they and their vassals sought protection from the vengeance of the victors. Despite the many storms of conflict which had raged around it, the castle suffered but little actual harm until in June or July, A. D. 1634, when, in the troubled times of that period, while Germany was invaded by the armies of Spain and Austria, it was stormed by Croatian soldiers, plundered and set on fire. The castle was not the only sufferer from the ravages of war; for after its downfall there remained in the Lordship of Runkel only two hundred and seventy inhabitants, all the others having taken flight. For eight years after the Croatian incursion, the fire-scarred walls of the nearly destroyed castle remained as left by their destroyers; they were then, in 1642, built up, repaired, and again made inhabitable. From that time to the present, while freed from the attacks of man, the mighty structure has been constantly subjected to the warring of the elements. Heat and cold, rain, sleet, and snow, all have combined against its massive masonry, and little by little are gaining the mastery. It may be centuries yet before the noble castle we have described becomes a complete ruin; but with no staying hand to oppose the forces of disintegration, the ancient home and cradle of the Runkel race must yield to inevitable destruction.

The Castle of Runkel continued to be the home and residence of the Lords of Runkel until 1825, when, at the death of the last in the direct line, it passed into the possession of another branch of the family, and became the property of the Princes of Wied-Neuwied. The Wied-Neuwieds, called now simply Princes of Wied, have their palace at Neuwied on the Rhine, and have never used the old home of the Runkels as a residence. Since the personal oversight of the owners has been removed the downward progress of the old castle has been more rapid. A considerable portion of the ancient structure is now in ruins, and the remainder is, with the permission of the Prince of Wied, used by the municipal authorities of the Town of Runkel as a city or town hall. The description we have given of this early home of the Runkels is merely preliminary to an outline sketch of those who from the darkest Middle Ages there lived their lives of peace or strife, of love or hate, of holiness or sin.

RUNKEL.

The name Runkel, Runckel, Runkle, or Runcle, as it is variously spelled, may possibly be derived from the Latin words runca, a weed, and cella, a dwelling-place; hence, runca-cella, a place of weeds. The slow process of change by which the Runca-cella of the Latins reached its present German abbreviation of Runkel we cannot pretend to trace; but were it permissible to wander in the realms of conjecture, it would not be difficult to follow, with seeming accuracy and with far more plausibility than is found in the majority of so-called derivations, the various steps or stages by which the change referred to was slowly accomplished. We have, therefore, as the meaning of the word Runkel, a place covered with weeds; Runkelstein (the name of a famous old castle in Tyrol), a rocky place, or a rock covered with weeds; Roncesvaux (French), or Roncesvalles (Spanish), of the same derivation, valleys of weeds or brambles.

If, however, as seems most probable, the word is of purely Teutonic origin, we can arrive at its meaning and its possible connection with the castle only by studying it (as alone it is found) in its compound form. For instance, "Runkelrübe," a beet—the Runkel referring to its firm or solid character; "Runke," a solid piece of bread; "Runken," a large solid piece, particularly of bread; "Runks," coarse, solid piece of bread. Taking then the adjective to mean solid or strong, we have "Runkelstein" (before mentioned) to mean a solid or strong rock, and Runkel, as the name given to the castle on the Lahn, would seem in its application to have originated from the same idea of firmness, solidity, or strength.

From the two derivations we have given, it is readily seen how broad a field there is for conjecture as to the origin and application of Runkel to the castle in which we are interested.

In seeming support of the Latin origin of the word, there is a tradition still existing in the town of Runkel which bears about it all the cobwebs of age and authenticity. The manner in which the castle received its name is thereby given as follows:

Roncesvaux or Roncesvalles is a narrow valley or pass of the Pyrenees, between France and Spain, in which the army of Charlemagne of France, while on its retreat from Spain, in A. D. 778, was attacked by mountaineers and nearly destroyed. Among those who escaped, says this tradition, was a soldier of fortune, who, on his return to his home, was so impressed with its resemblance to the perilous pass on the French boundary, in which so many of his comrades had found their final resting-place, that he determined to name it after that far-away vale so vividly fixed in memory as the scene of his deadly peril and almost miraculous escape.

In Reck's history of the Houses of Isenburg, Runkel, and Wied, published in 1825, he says: "In A. D. 1139, the Emperor Lothair II. died, shortly after promulgating his remarkable decrees in the plains of Ronkal, near Piacenza in North Italy. It may be that the Earls of Runkel were granted this name (which they only now brought into constant use) by the Emperor, as an honor and in remembrance of these plains, as Graf (Lord) Siegfried was at the camp by the river Po with the Emperor." The historian then adds: "But it is more probable that they took their name from their Castle of Runkel." Whether, then, the castle took its name from the owners, or they theirs from the castle, will always be an open question: the answer was lost centuries ago, far back in the early Middle Ages.

EUROPEAN FAMILY OF RUNKEL.

The history of the House of Runkel may very properly be divided into five periods:

FIRST. Extending from the origin of the House up to about the year 1270, when the Lordships of Runkel and Westerburg became separated, passing to different branches of the family.

SECOND. The period from 1270 to 1462, at which latter date the Lordship of Runkel and the Countship of Wied were united in the House of Runkel.

THIRD. From 1462 to 1696, when the properties were again separated in ownership: That branch of the familiy, to whom came the Lordship of Runkel and part of Wied, being known as the Wied-Runkels; the other, to whom was given the remainder of the Countship of Wied, being known as the Wied-Neuwieds.

FOURTH. From 1696 to 1825, at which date, through the extinction of the Wied-Runkels, the properties again became united in the Wied-Neuwied branch, whose head became known as the Prince of Wied.

FIFTH. From 1825 to the present.

THE LORDS OF WESTERBURG AND RUNKEL.

The Earls of Westerburg and Runkel belonged to the Frank-Salic race, and must have begun, about A. D. 1002, with Graf (Lord) Theobald or Godebold, who was a descendant of Udo or Otto, Lord of Lahngau, and brother of the German Emperor, Conrad I. It is possible that this Theobald was a son of Lord Erlach, the earliest ancestor of the Isenburgs. Concerning the life of this Runkel progenitor we have no particulars, and find his reign of half a century summed up in the following short paragraph : "And Lord Theobald ruled in Runkel-land until 1052, and was succeeded by his son Reinhard." Another son, Emerich, became the founder of the House of Dietz.

Of Reinhard, the successor of Theobald, there is also a dearth of information. That he played his part upon the stage of life, and was in turn succeeded by his son, Siegfried I., is all we know of him. This Siegfried is the first to whom is applied the title, "Lord of Westerburg and Runkel." Of these Lordships, Westerburg would appear to have been the more important, and mention is made of it in history quite some time before any is made of Runkel. The House of Runkel, it would seem, was really a branch of the House of Westerburg, or, as is most probable, the two Lordships became joined under one head, in much the same manner as later the Principality of Wied became united with the less important Lordship of Runkel. Returning to our subject: Siegfried I. was distinguished for the nobility of his character and his earnest piety. In the year 1100 he founded the Convent of Seeligenstadt, and endowed it with its first landed possessions, giving it vineyards in Bendorf and Leudesdorf. In a deed of that period, found in the archives of the Convent, mention is made of Hermann, a son of Siegfried I.

Concerning the successor of this pious ruler, Siegfried II., nothing has come down to us through the ages beyond the mere fact of his existence. He had two sons, Henry and Siegfried III. The latter married a daughter of Gerhard I., Earl of Dietz. In 1219 he went to Palestine —presenting, however, before his departure, gifts and privileges to the Convent of Seeligenstadt, which his ancestor, Siegfried I., had founded and endowed. His death occurred in 1227, not many years after his return from the Holy Land. Upon his decease, his son, Siegfried IV., received the Castle of Westerburg and fifty marks in money.

Owing to the fact that the boundaries to the properties of Siegfried IV. and of his brother Dietrich were not defined with exactitude, the close proximity of their estates led to frequent and bitter quarrels between them: these, however, at the time of Dietrich's death—about the year 1250—apparently had been healed. For a brief period his son Siegfried reigned conjointly with Siegfried IV., uncle of the latter, over Westerburg and Runkel. It was not long, however, before the old quarrel over boundaries sprang up again, and waxed so fierce that the nephew finally drove his uncle into his Castle of Runkel and laid siege to it. While the quarrel was at its height, Siegfried IV. died, leaving seven children: Isolda, Adelaide, Siegfried, Henry, Philip, Reinhard, and Jutta. His brother Dietrich had had only three children: Wilhelm, Siegfried, and a daughter Bella.

Siegfried IV. was succeeded, as to his titles, estates, and quarrels, by his son Henry, who continued the fight with his cousin Siegfried until the latter conquered the Castle of Runkel, after which a proper division of the property was made and the quarrel finally concluded. By this separation of interests, Henry, son of Siegfried IV., received the Lordship and became the founder of the House of Westerburg, while his cousin Siegfried, son of Dietrich, became Siegfried I. of Runkel.

Before bidding adieu to the House and Lordship of Westerburg, it may not be inappropriate to give a brief outline of their subsequent history.

Westerburg is in Westerwald, Rhenish Prussia, not far distant from Runkel; it is the chief place of the mediatized Countship of Leiningen-Westerburg, and in 1885 had 1,297 inhabitants. Leiningen (now united with Westerburg) was in 1317 divided into "Older" and "Younger" lines. The "Older" line became extinct in the male issue in 1467, when Margaret, sister of the last Count and widow of Reinhard, Lord of Westerburg, seized the greater part of the possessions and transmitted the succession to her descendants, as Counts of Leiningen-Westerburg. This family is now divided into two branches: Counts of Old Leiningen-Westerburg and Counts of New Leiningen-Westerburg. The Lordship of Schadeck, on the opposite side of the Lahn from Runkel, is divided in halves between the two branches. (Queen Victoria is a descendant of the "Younger" line of Leiningen on her maternal side.)

Of the children of Siegfried IV. (the last ruler of the joint Lordships of Westerburg and Runkel), Isolda, the eldest, married Bruno III. of Braunsberg; Henry, as we have said, became head of the House of Westerburg; while his older brother, Siegfried, and the three youngest children entered holy orders. The Siegfried last mentioned, son of Siegfried IV., was, in A. D. 1270, first priest in Mayence and later became Archbishop of Cologne. He was, however, more devoted to the sword than to the cross, and the record we have of his career is one of almost continuous broil and battle.

The selection of Siegfried for the Archbishopric was the choice of only a part of the Chapter; his nomination was enforced, however (notwithstanding equal votes were cast for Lord Conrad von Berg), by Pope Gregory X., who consecrated him in Lyons, on Palm Sunday, in 1275. Adolph von Berg, brother of the defeated Conrad, angered at the latter's discomfiture, assisted by Wilhelm von Julich, uprose against the Archbishop; but in the furious battle which followed he was overpowered, and Lord Conrad was compelled to be contented with a pecuniary compensation of six thousand marks.

During the two years, from 1278 to 1280, Siegfried was in continuous and open warfare with his various foes, among whom was Wilhelm von Julich, who, with his son and four hundred knights, invaded Aachen (Aix), but was killed. So greatly was the Archbishop rejoiced at Julich's death, that he once exclaimed, while celebrating mass, "Lord, now I know thou hast delivered me from the vengeance of the lion!" after which he proceeded to take possession of the landed property of the Julichs. These thefts, however, he was compelled, by Pope Martin IV. and the allied nobles, to return to the rightful heirs. After a short respite the Archbishop invaded the possessions of the Counts of Berg, tore down the Castles of Mülheim and Monheim, and compelled Adolph to submit. After this Siegfried went about with gangs of mountain brigands, whom he allowed to plunder even merchants in Cologne.

In 1286 occurred one of the fiercest battles of the Middle Ages, in which, pitted against our fighting Archbishop, was a whole coalition of his neighbors, headed by Duke John, the Victorious, of Brabant. Duke John was Suzerain of the country between the Maas and the Rhine, and in his march against Cologne had with him fifteen hundred earls, knights, and Brabant noblemen with their followers. Among these were Eberhart (Earl of Isenburg-Grenzau), the Earls of Sayne, Sponheim, etc. The battle took place at Worungen, between Cologne and Neus, on June 5th in the year mentioned.

On the morning of the day of conflict, the Archbishop celebrated mass in the Abbey of Brauweiler, and pronounced banishment from the Church against his foes. His enemy, Duke John, also heard mass, and kindled the courage of his troops with a thrilling speech. Then the battle began; and, after alternations of success and failure, Siegfried's horse was killed under him, and, standing on a mound of corpses, he at length surrendered to one Gottfried von Vierson. Lord Adolph von Berg, however, was chiefly instrumental in Siegfried's defeat, and had his prisoner, with others, conducted to Manheim. More than six thousand men and four thousand horses were killed in this battle, while among the prisoners taken—which in numbers exceeded the victorious army—were Henry I. of Westerburg (the Archbishop's brother) and Salentin I. of Isenburg. In the victorious army, besides those we have mentioned, were Adolph (the future Emperor) and Walram of Nassau. The Castle of Worungen, which Archbishop Siegfried had just rebuilt, was destroyed by the conquerors; and on its site stood, until 1825, and possibly may yet stand, a chapel, where, until shortly before the year just mentioned, masses were said for those who died in this conflict.

Henry I. of Westerburg finally obtained the Archbishop's freedom. After his release Siegfried was continually meditating vengeance against Adolph von Berg, even more than against his other enemies. At last, when to all appearances they were on friendly terms, Siegfried begged Lord Adolph to escort him on one of his journeys back to Cologne. Suspecting nothing, Adolph consented, and accompanied the Archbishop with an escort of only four men. On reaching Bensberg, they found there a retinue of one hundred men belonging to the Archbishop, who seized Adolph, bound him in chains, threw him into a wagon which they had in readiness, and took him to Cologne. On reaching the city, he was imprisoned for a time in a foul cell; but later, when the hot weather came on, he was removed from this, stripped of his clothing, smeared all over with honey, and shut up in an iron cage, which was fastened to the wall of the town, there to endure torments from stings of wasps and flies. All the entreaties of Adolph and of his friends in his behalf were in vain: Siegfried's reply being that he wished to show what it was to imprison an Archbishop. At the end of thirteen months the unfortunate man was freed by Duke John of Brabant, who came with an armed force to rescue him.

After this Siegfried built the Fortress of Bruel, to shelter himself from the inhabitants of Cologne, whose enmity his lawless actions had aroused; and he also built the Castle of Sons. The last record we have of Archbishop Siegfried is that of his beginning to build the Franciscan Church at Bonn, at which place his career appears to have ended.

Henry I. of Westerburg, shortly after the division of properties with his cousin, built, on the right bank of the Lahn, opposite Runkel, but on a higher rocky eminence, the Castle of Schadeck. This castle is much smaller than Runkel and absolutely devoid of beauty. Standing on a high hill, surrounded by fertile fields, it reminds one of a large stone prison or warehouse. About this same time (1270), the old stone bridge which connects the two banks of the Lahn was originally built.

LORDS OF RUNKEL.

Siegfried I., first Lord of Runkel after its separation from Westerburg, married Margaretha, who was erroneously supposed to have been a member of the powerful and wealthy Katzenelnbogen family. Their sons were Tilman, Eberhard, Siegfried, and Dietrich; their daughters, Elizabeth (Elsa) and Gertrude, who became canonesses at Essen.

Siegfried I. died in 1294, and was succeeded by his son Tilman. Two years after the death of his father Tilman is recorded as having made gifts to that Convent of Seeligenstadt which had previously been so well remembered by his ancestors. Later still, in 1305, Lord Tilman, together with Johann I. of Limburg, presented to the Convent of Eschenau, which is on the territory of Runkel, and to the Chapel of Befelech, thirty measures of land, "to further the welfare of their souls." Lord Tilman had two sons, Siegfried and Frederick. What became of these two sons we do not know; but their father, at his death, seems to have been succeeded by his brother Dietrich II. The latter distinguished himself at the great tournament of Ravensberg, held in 1311. Four years later, in 1315, Dietrich II. took sides with the Emperor Ludwig in the quarrels of the latter with his nobles. The Emperor, praising Dietrich's fidelity, presented to him the Castle of Kalzmont and thirty pounds in silver, which were raised from the Jews in Wetzlar; generously authorized him to hold four Jews in the town of Runkel and levy contributions from them—which no doubt he did; granted him the produce of duties at Bacharach and Heidelberg, which brought in as much as 4,225 livres tournois in one year; and he commanded the Archbishop Baldwin to see that his instructions be properly carried out. Shortly after, Dietrich also received from Prince Elector Peter of Mayence the Castle of Lahneck.

This ruler of Runkel appears to have possessed a disposition very similar to that of the not too saintly Archbishop; for, after enjoying to the full the quarrels of the Emperor, he succeeded, by the year 1336, in becoming embroiled with his own minor nobles. Still later, in 1344, the discord between himself and associated nobles and the Archbishop Baldwin became so great that it necessitated the interference of Pope Clement VI.

In 1370 death brought the quarrels of Dietrich II. to a close, and Dietrich III. flourished in his stead. Like his father, this Prince was soon in the full enjoyment of what was fast becoming the family pastime—fighting. First he became engaged in a controversy with Adolph von Nordeck and his vassals. Later, in 1374, while indulging in the same delightful business against the town of Friedberg, he was worsted in the combat. This somewhat dampened his love for the sport, and the several succeeding years were spent by him in comparative quietude.

During this time, in 1375, the Lords of Runkel, together with several others, were made to pay taxes to the House of Orange-Nassau.

As the sting of Dietrich's defeat wore off, his former disposition reasserted itself, and, with his brother Siegfried, he again became engaged in a feud, this time with the town of Wetzlar. The above quarrel, however, was amicably settled.

Dietrich III. married Jutta, a daughter of Salentin von Sayn and Wittgenstein. They had three sons: Frederick III., Siegfried, and Dietrich IV., and one daughter, Else.

Towards the close of his life Dietrich III. grew weary of continuous strife, and sought a reconciliation with his various foes, among whom were Archbishop Werner von Trier and Henry of Nassau. After his death, which occurred in 1403, his widow was sheltered by his kinsman, Reinhard III., of Westerburg, in the Castle of Schadeck, and Frederick III., his eldest son, succeeded him. Frederick died in 1427, and was followed in the succession by his brother, Dietrich IV.

Lord Dietrich IV., shortly after his brother's death, was present at the Assembly in Frankfort, which voted the outfitting of a numerous army to be sent against the Hussites in Bohemia. This decision had unfortunate consequences. In 1547 he, with his eldest son, filled the post of honor of Lords of the Justice at Andernach. A few years later, in A. D. 1460, he, together with Archbishop Diether of Mayence, took part in the disastrous feud between the latter and Pfalzgraf Frederick, and was taken prisoner by the latter's victorious army, together with Lord John of Nassau, Philip von Leiningen, and others. Peace being declared shortly afterwards, they were released.

Dietrich IV. of Runkel married Anastasia, only child and heiress of John II., Prince of Wied and Lord of Isenburg. He had four sons, Frederick IV., William, Dietrich V., and John, and one daughter, Agnes. The dower of Anastasia, wife of Dietrich, consisted of her father's inheritance of the castles, strongholds, and Lordships of Isenburg, Grenzhausen, Alsbach, and the Wieds' share of the Axenfels country. Through the death of her uncle, William II., Count of Isenburg-Wied, the extinction of male heirs of that family, and by the will of the late Count, Frederick, her eldest son in 1462 became Count of Wied. Upon the death of his father, Dietrich IV., he also became Lord of Runkel, and thus Wied, Isenburg, and Runkel became united in the line of Runkel.

These several possessions were sovereignties in the German Empire, and their possessors were of the class designated as "dynasts," petty sovereigns. Their territories are not adjacent: Wied being in the district of Westerwald, in Rhenish Prussia, while Runkel is well within the limits of the old Duchy of Nassau; Wied is of much the greater extent.

William, the second son of Dietrich IV., married Irmgard von Rollingen, and upon the death of his father received a part of his parent's property. Through him Countess Margaretha of Leiningen-Westerburg received half of the domain of Schadeck, which had been given to the Runkels. He died at Isenburg in 1492, and was buried at Romersdorf. William's sister, Agnes, married Earl Gottfried von Eppstein. In 1482 it is recorded that Dietrich V., third son of Dietrich IV., presented to the citizens of the Burg of Runkel some landed property on condition that they should keep a lamp constantly burning before the Holy Sacrament in the Chapel of Runkel. He died December 17, 1484. After the death of Dietrich V., his brother John entered into a compact with Frederick, the eldest of the family, to the effect that, should John die without any heirs direct, Frederick's heirs should have Runkel, all but the share of the property owned by their brother William.

COUNTS OF WIED AND LORDS OF RUNKEL.

Frederick, the first head of the united possessions of Wied and Runkel, married Agnes von Virneburg, and his children were: Adam, William III., John III., Theodore, Hermann, Frederick, and Johannette. He died in 1487. In 1472 Adam, eldest son of Frederick, is mentioned in the archives of the Cathedral of Cologne as a canon. In 1475 William III. was invested with the same dignity; and yet later, in 1482, Theodore. Hermann, the fifth son of Frederick, became Archbishop Elector of Cologne in 1515, and on October 23d, 1519, at Aix-la-Chapelle, he anointed and crowned Charles V. Emperor of Germany. As he was friendly to the Reformation, the Pope deposed him. The youngest son of Frederick, also named Frederick, was, about 1506, a Deacon in the Church of St. Gereon at Cologne.

The successor of Frederick was John III., his third son. This Lord of Runkel married Elizabeth of Nassau, and had ten children. We now find no particular mention of the Runkels until 1560, when they again appear with the name of John IV. of Wied, Lord of Runkel and Isenburg, who at that time introduced the Reformed religion in the Burg of Irlich and also in the Lordship of Runkel.

His brother Frederick became Archbishop Elector of Cologne in 1562, and crowned the Emperor Maximilian II. at Aix-la-Chapelle. John IV. of Wied, Lord of Runkel and Isenburg, married Catharine of Hanau-Münzenberg, and had seven children. His death occurred June 15, 1581. By his will he bequeathed to his eldest son, Hermann I., the Earldom of Wied, the Lordship of Isenburg, and other property. To his second son, William IV., was left the Castle and Lordship of Runkel and several other domains. A quarrel arose between the two brothers on account of this division, which, lasting to the end of the century, was only made up at the beginning of the next.

Hermann I., of Wied, married Walburgis, sister of the Earl of Bentheim-Teklenburg, and had four sons and five daughters. He was an ardent follower of the Reformed religion, and took an active part in all endeavors to further its aims. Regiments were raised in the neighborhood for the purpose of enlisting in the service of the Protestant King, Henry IV. (then King of Navarre), in France. Hermann, with one of these of which he was colonel, joined the King, and together they entered Normandy and laid siege to Rouen. Death, however, there overtook the brave Earl, and he expired in the King's camp.

William IV., the brother of Hermann I., married Johanna Sibylla, daughter of Earl Philip of Hanau-Lichtenberg, and had six daughters.

After Hermann's death, before mentioned, the Runkel and Wied heirlooms were divided between William IV. and the sons of Hermann.

In 1606 the latter's two eldest sons, John William and Hermann II., ended their studies in Herborn and attained their majority. John William, the eldest, married Magdalena, daughter of Earl Siegmund zu Hardeck (her mother was a Wied), and his children were: John William (the younger), Philip Ludwig (the younger), Johanna Walburgis, Juliana Magdalena, and Amalia.

Hermann II. married, in 1613, Juliana Elizabeth of Solms-Lich and Münzenberg. He was a learned nobleman, and, according to the spirit of his age, passionately fond of astrology. He observed with great accuracy, at the birth of each of his fourteen children, the position of the planets, of the sun, the moon, and of the stars in the signs of the Zodiac; these observations were set down in Latin booklets, one for each child. These booklets were preserved in the princely archives of Runkel-Wied. Taking the observations thus made, he predicted the whole future of his children, the times of their deaths, etc. It is hardly necessary to add that time proved the inaccuracy of these prophecies.

On October 1, 1617, these two reigning brothers, John William and Hermann II., celebrated the first jubilee feast in honor of the Reformed religion on their estates. The whole day was given up to religious observances and thanksgiving.

Hermann II. died October 13, 1632, leaving his fourteen children under the care of his widow and the tutorship of Earl Reinhard of Leiningen. An oval gold medal was struck off in memory of the noble Lord, bearing the effigy of his bust and the inscription: "Hermanus Co. a Weda in Runck et Iseburg." On the reverse is the tree of science with the snake coiled around it. Among the branches are inscribed these words: "Salus in Christo, Fidelitate et Veritate." (The last three words form the motto of the arms of the Runkel-Wieds.)

The names of his children were: Frederick, Moritz Christian, Hermann, John Ernst, Ferdinand, and William Ludwig.

Two years after Hermann's death, in 1634, Germany was ravaged by war. In June or July of that year, as previously mentioned, the Castle of Runkel was stormed and burned by the Croatian soldiery, and Lord Philip Ludwig, the younger, son of John William, was taken prisoner by the Austrian army. In 1637 the misery resultant from the state of warfare in the environs of Runkel was at its height. Famine and desolation were rife; the soldiers eagerly devoured any refuse; hides of animals, dead horses' hoofs, and what few provisions could be obtained commanded exorbitant prices.

In the spring of 1638 Lord Frederick, eldest son of Hermann II., married Maria Juliana, widow of Earl Reinhard zu Leiningen.

Moritz Christian, the second son, married, in 1642, Katharine Julia, daughter of Earl Philip of Hanau and of his wife, Kate Belgica of Orange-Nassau. He it was who built up and repaired the Castle of Runkel. At this time only a few houses remained on the estate.

On account, it is supposed, of the lack of accommodations at Runkel for his large family and numerous retinue, in 1648 Lord Frederick had a house built for himself at a spot called Langendorf. This proved to be the beginning of a new town, now Neuwied.

In 1657 Lord Frederick's wife, Maria Juliana, died, after giving birth to her fifteenth child.

The town of Neuwied, under the supervision of its founder, grew apace: a growth which Frederick watched with greatest interest and fostered by every means in his power. He granted special privileges to its inhabitants, and about 1662 built his Castle of Friedrichstein.

On October 20, 1663, he married his second wife, Philippina Sabina, Countess of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurss. They lived united for nineteen years, but had no children.

After a few peaceful months the wars with the Austrians and Turks broke out afresh. Three of Frederick's sons went forth with the army, as officers, to fight the enemies of Christendom. At last the Germans carried the day, at the battle of St. Gotthard; after which a twenty years' truce was concluded. From this war, of the three sons of Frederick who entered it, but one, Frederick Melchior, came back: the two others having died on the field of battle.

In 1670 Frederick built a church for his town of Neuwied, the inhabitants having previously been compelled to attend religious services at Heddersdorf.

Two of Frederick's daughters, Sibylla Christina and Sibylla Elizabeth, who were ladies in waiting to the Empress of Austria, in 1676 returned to the Roman Catholic religion, and by so doing deeply offended their parents. The Empress, however, acted as mediator, and obtained their forgiveness.

By 1685 the town of Neuwied could boast of three churches: one for the followers of the Reformed religion, one for the Lutheran, and one for the Roman Catholic. The last, however, were forbidden to erect any sacred images by the way-side or to have any processions in the streets.

Owing to the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, by which Louis XIV. of France compelled half a million of his subjects to become exiles, the town of Neuwied acquired a valuable contingent of new inhabitants. Many of these were intelligent artisans, who resumed their occupations, to the advantage of themselves and of their adopted country.

Some time prior to this, Frederick had lost his second wife, Philippina Sabina, and ten months afterward married his third, Maria von Hohensolms. She also appears soon to have departed this life, for in 1686 Frederick for a fourth time ventured into the marriage state: this time with Louise of Bentheim-Teklenburg. This last wife, at the time of her marriage, was thirty-nine years of age.

After a long and agitated reign, during which constant wars with Austria, the Turks, and, lastly, with the armies of Louis XIV., had desolated the country, and after many difficulties with his innumerable relatives and neighbors, deserving the admiration and gratitude of his countrymen for the indefatigable energy which he had displayed notwithstanding all these obstacles, having, despite them, improved the condition of his people and of his estates, in 1698, at the age of eighty years, in the town of Neuwied, which he had created, Lord Frederick of Wied and Runkel breathed his last.

Lord Frederick's eldest son, George Hermann Reinhard, had died in 1690, leaving a number of children; and of his other sons all except the youngest, Frederick William, had passed away before him without leaving issue.

Upon his death the Wied and Runkel domains were divided between his grandson, Maximilian Henry (son of George Hermann Reinhard) and his youngest son, above mentioned, Frederick William.

To Maximilian Henry, then a lad of sixteen years, was left the Lordship of Runkel and part of the Countship of Wied. The capital of his possessions was Dierdorf; Runkel, however, was the principal residence of the family. The heads of this branch of the Runkels now became known as the Princes of Wied-Runkel.

To Frederick William was left the remainder of the Countship of Wied, with his capital and place of residence at Neuwied; and his branch of the family now became known as the Wied-Neuwieds.

The separation of the Runkel and Wied properties between the Princes of Wied-Runkel and Wied-Neuwied continued for a hundred and twenty-seven years, when, through the extinction of the Wied-Runkel branch, they were again united.

PRINCES OF WIED-RUNKEL AND WIED-NEUWIED.

WIED-RUNKEL.

In 1704 Maximilian Henry of Wied-Runkel married Sophia of Lippe, and a year later, May 30, 1705, a son, John Ludwig Adolph, was born to them at Runkel.

On June 19, 1706, their second son, Charles William Alexander Emil, was born, and, in the autumn following, Maximilian, in company with Landgrave Ernst of Hesse-Darmstadt, went to Stuttgart. There he met his cousin, Lord George of Leiningen-Westerburg; they quarreled, and a duel was decided upon. This took place at the village of Schmieden, and resulted fatally to Maximilian Henry, who was twice shot in the body, and expired within a few hours. Thus ended the life of this hopeful and well-favored young Prince, leaving a twenty-four-year-old widow and two infant sons.

In 1722 Earl Charles, brother of the deceased Maximilian, was named President of the Council by the Emperor Charles VI. He died in 1764, aged nearly eighty years. In 1756 a son of Earl Charles, Henry George Frederick, was a lieutenant-general in the Austrian army, and headed one thousand men at the battle of Lowositz, where the Austrians were defeated by King Frederick II. Besides serving with distinction in the Seven Years' War, he also held the positions of imperial chancellor, general ordnance officer, general of a regiment of Bohemian foot-soldiers, received the Grand Cross of the Order of Maria Theresa, and was appointed Governor of Milan.

About the same time that Henry George Frederick was distinguishing himself in the Austrian army, his elder brother, Francis Charles Ludwig, was doing the same as general in the Prussian ranks. Another brother, Charles Henry, the youngest of the family, toward the close of the century was President of the States-General of Holland, and was a Knight of the Order of the Lion.

Returning to the family of Maximilian, whose early tragic death we have recorded, we find, in 1725, his son, John Ludwig Adolph, a young man who, with intervals of travel, had been educated at Utrecht, married to the Countess Christine, daughter of Prince Frederick of Ostfriedland. In 1728 their first son, Charles Ludwig, was born. Three years later John Ludwig quarreled with his mother, Sophia, who thereupon retired, until the second half of the century, to the Castle of Runkel.

Christine, the wife of this Earl, died in 1732, ten days after giving birth to her last child, Christian Ludwig. One year later he married his second wife, Amalia Luise of Sayn-Wittgenstein; and in 1737 she also died, five days after the birth of a daughter, who did not survive her.

In 1744 Charles William Emil, second son of Maximilian Henry and brother of John Ludwig, went to the Court of Vienna: became a convert to Catholicism, was appointed chamberlain to the Emperor Charles VII., and had many other dignities conferred upon him.

John Ludwig Adolph of Wied-Runkel died in 1782, at the age of fifty-seven, and was succeeded by his son Christian Ludwig. This Earl married Charlotte Sophia Augusta of Sayn-Wittgenstein, and their first son, Charles Ludwig Frederick Alexander, was born in 1763: a year hailed with delight in the Rhine Valley, as, after seven years of fighting, peace was restored by means of the Treaty of Hubertsburg. A younger son of John Ludwig Adolph, Francis Ludwig, was a colonel in the French regiment of Royal-Bavière, and died in 1791.

Christian Ludwig also died in 1791, in the same month with his brother, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Charles Ludwig Frederick Alexander, who began to reign with the titles of Prince of Wied, Earl of Isenburg, Lord of Runkel and Neuerburg, Hereditary Marshal of the Duchy of Luxembourg, and of the Earldom of Chiny and Knight of the Polish Order of the White Eagle.

This Prince was a great student, and distinguished himself at the University of Strassburg. He married, in 1787, Carolina Louisa Frederike, daughter of Prince

Charles of Nassau-Weilburg, and a number of years later, after the Peace of Luneville, in 1800, lost his possessions on the French side of the Rhine: these were Krichingen, Püttlingen, and Saarwellingen.

Near the close of the eighteenth century, both Wied-Runkel and Wied-Neuwied were constituted principalities of the Empire, and in 1814 passed under the dominion of Nassau, their former rulers becoming mediatized Princes. A year or two later Nassau made over the territories of Wied to Prussia, retaining those of Runkel: and so they continued until the absorption of Nassau into the Kingdom of Prussia, thus all becoming Prussian.

Prince Charles Ludwig Frederick Alexander died in 1824, after fulfilling a noble career as soldier and Prince. He left a widow, but no children. The next heir to the line of Wied-Runkel thus became his then surviving brother, Frederick Ludwig.

This Prince, who had previously been taken prisoner by the French, and who was a colonel in the Austrian service, was again captured during the campaign which took place in 1799 between Austria and France; he was sent to Paris, but was exchanged in the course of the following year and entrusted with the formation of a new Austrian regiment at Ingolstadt.

In 1809 Prince Frederick Ludwig was promoted to the rank of major-general, and after the battle of Aspern received from the hands of the Archduke Charles the Order of Maria Theresa. Several years later, in 1813, he distinguished himself by his valor and intelligence at the siege of Dresden against the French, whose commanding officer was General Gouvion St. Cyr, and in the following year he commanded the left wing of the Austrian army at Lyons, contributing considerably to the victory there obtained.

In 1823 he conducted the Austrian expedition to Naples, where he won fresh glories, and received the Grand Cross of the Order of San Georgio della Reunione.

Prince Frederick Ludwig, having won distinction in the German War of Independence, had indulged in his favorite scientific tastes, and was living at Prague when the news of his brother's death reached him. He started immediately for Runkel, but had no sooner arrived there than he was taken ill, probably having contracted the disease before starting on his journey, and in his turn expired. He also having died with no direct heirs, the line of Wied-Runkel, which began at the end of the seventeenth century, with Maximilian Henry, became extinct, and the two lines of Wied-Neuwied and Wied-Runkel, with all the estates and titles attached to them, were reunited under the then reigning Prince of Wied-Neuwied, August Charles.

Before proceeding with the history of the Princes of Wied, it is necessary to briefly trace out the Wied-Neuwied branch of the family during the one hundred and twenty-seven years of the separation.

WIED NEUWIED.

As we have previously shown, upon the death of Frederick, in 1698, his youngest son, Frederick William, received, as his share of his father's estates, the principal part of the Countship of Wied, with his home and capital at Neuwied on the Rhine.

This Prince married Louise Charlotte, Countess of Dohna, and received from the King on this occasion the Order of the Black Eagle. His death occurred in 1737, and he was succeeded by his son John Frederick Alexander, who married Carolina, daughter of the Burggrave George Frederick of Kirchberg, Lord of Sayn and Wittgenstein. His brother, Francis Charles Ludwig, became a lieutenant-general under the King of Prussia, and died in 1765.

Prince John Frederick Alexander of Wied-Neuwied died in 1791, and was succeeded by his son Frederick Charles, who married the Countess Louise Wilhelmina of Sayn-Wittgenstein zu Berleburg. This Prince was in turn succeeded by John August Charles, during whose reign and in whose person the estates and titles of Wied-Runkel and Wied-Neuwied were reunited.

WIED.

John August Charles, Prince of Wied, Lord of Runkel, etc., was born at Neuwied, May 26, 1779. He had two older brothers, both of whom, however, died in the year 1800. He married Sophia Augusta of Solms-Braunfels, and had four children. Of these, William Hermann Charles, born May 22, 1814, succeeded him. This Prince married a Princess of Nassau, who is still living and resides near Neuwied.

The successor of Prince William Hermann Charles, and present head of the Houses of Wied and Runkel, is his son William Adolphus Maximilian Charles, Prince of Wied. This Prince, who is a general in the Prussian army and President of the Prussian House of Lords, was born at Neuwied, August 22, 1845. He married, July 18, 1871,

Marie, Princess of Holland, born July 5, 1841, who brought to her husband an immense fortune. The sister of the Prince of Wied, Pauline Elizabeth Odile Louise, is the present Queen of Roumania, and a woman of much literary ability. Her writings appear under the nom-de-plume, "Carmen Sylva."

The titles of William Adolphus Maximilian Charles von Runkel are: Prince of the Holy Empire, Prince of Wied, Count of Isenburg, and Lord of Runkel and Neuerburg. To these are added the qualification of "Hochgeboren" ("Highborn") and the title of "Durchlaucht" ("Serene Highness"). He has five children; of whom the eldest, Prince Frederick, is now (1899) twenty-seven years of age. This Prince is a lieutenant of Uhlans, and is soon to marry Princess Pauline, daughter of the King of Würtemberg. The second son, William Frederick Henry, is a lieutenant in the Prussian Guards, and is rumored to be engaged to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

Thus have we followed the line of the ancient House of Runkel down through the ages, to find it, at our parting, preparing to take a still more exalted position among the princely houses of Europe. From these, the past and present representatives of the Old World family, we will now turn our attention to those of the New.

THE AMERICAN RUNKLES.

In preparing a genealogy of American families, a writer often finds comparatively little difficulty in tracing back, link by link, to the ancestor who cut adrift from the home and associations of the Old World; but when it comes to recrossing the sea in an effort to round out and complete his history, like an impenetrable veil, Old Ocean sets up a barrier which seems to say: "Thus far shalt thou go, but no farther." After many and fruitless attempts to pierce the mystery of the past, he is compelled to leave it in the deep shadow from which it seems impossible to rescue its treasures, and to begin his work with the New World story of the line he is tracing, frequently prefacing it, however, with such flotsam and jetsam as through tradition may have been rescued from the sea of oblivion.

In collecting information relative to the various Runkle families in America,* it was with these same difficulties we have had to contend. They are descendants of those emigrants of the name who, during the eighteenth century, sought the hospitable shores of this country, with the hope of securing those chances for advancement which were denied them in the land of their birth. These, our German forefathers, made their homes in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, and from the States mentioned, their children, and their children's children have spread out and scattered, until now almost every State and Territory of the Union contains a larger or smaller number of their offspring.

There is a general tradition of relationship through these different Runkle branches, and a very noticeable similarity in all the stories which have come down to us of their surroundings and family position in the old country, all of which tend to show their near kinship. Among these traditions may be mentioned the contradictory ones as to the German or Holland origin of the family: a contradiction not confined to one branch of the family alone.

In a list of early emigrants who took the oath of allegiance published by Rupp, and subsequently also published by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, we find the following:

> "Imported in ship Loyal Judith, James Cowie, Master, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, September 2, 1743, Nickel Runckel, Johan Runkel."
> "Imported in the ship Hampshire, Thomas Cheesman, Captain, from Rotterdam, last from Falmouth, September 7, 1748, Jacob Runckel."
> "Imported in the Two Brothers, Thomas Arnott, Master, from Rotterdam, last from Portsmouth, September 15, 1748, Jeremias Runckel, Johan Jost Runckel."
> "Palatines, ship St. Andrews, James Ambercrombie, Master, from Rotterdam, last from Plymouth, September 9, 1749, Johannes Runkel."
>
> "On ship Richmond, October 20, 1764, Wendel Runkel."
>
> "On brig Morning Star, December 24, 1772, John Runkel."
> "On ship Brittania, September 18, 1773, Mich. Runckel and Philip Runckel."

From the foregoing Runkles are descended most of those bearing the name in the United States. The fact that persons under sixteen years of age were not required to take the oath of allegiance, and also because many of the records had become very much defaced and mutilated or had entirely disappeared before the publication of the lists was undertaken, may account for the absence therefrom of the names of certain of the early emigrants of whose arrival there seems to be no record.

The data we have given relative to the New Jersey Runkles is pretty complete, while that of the New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia families is to a certain extent fragmentary.

The description of the German home life and social environments of Adam Runkle, progenitor of the New Jersey family, must be understood as generally applying to the childhood scenes of the other early emigrants; they were born in a land where, at that time, the making of headway against adverse social conditions was virtually an impossibility: hence their resolve to come to that New World beyond the waters, where all men could have an equal chance.

THE NEW JERSEY RUNKLES.

1. ADAM RUNKLE was of German descent, and no doubt, more or less remotely, was related and traced his ancestry to the Runkels or Runckels who, in the early Middle Ages, were prominent in the Valley of the Lahn, a river tributary to the Rhine. There can be no doubt as to the nationality of the Runkle stock: it was German. It is necessary, however, to try to reconcile conflicting traditions as to the fatherland of this, our emigrant ancestor, before proceeding with the story of his life.

By a large portion of the family it is asserted that he came from Holland, and many of an earlier generation, now long passed away, were also of that belief. As tending to support this tradition, we would mention a corresponding one among the New York and Pennsylvania Runkles: the generally acknowledged relationship—though what, not exactly known—between these different branches, and the assertion, by some of the older living members of the New York family, that within their remembrance the "Low Dutch" language was ordinarily spoken by their parents. Of course, the speaking of the Holland language in the home of these early Runkles may be accounted for by the fact of their having made their homes in a section of country almost exclusively settled by Hollanders. The word Runkle, whatever the spelling, is distinctively

German—the surname of an influential family belonging to the higher social order of Germany, the nobility. It is not a Holland family name, nor is there within the pales of the Low Countries a family, tracing their descent entirely therein, bearing the name of Runkle or one kindred thereto. If, then, Adam Runkle was a Hollander, one of his ancestors, possibly on account of religious persecution or for political reasons, must have left his German home for the enjoyment of the greater freedom offered by the Netherlands.

In addition to those who hold to the Holland tradition, there is a large number of Adam's descendants who are of the firm opinion that he was German through and through, and the tradition on which their belief is founded bears, equally with the other, the impress of ancestral approval. By them it is stated that he came from the Valley of the Rhine, and by one member of the family it has been affirmed that his German home was in Baden. As tending to reconcile these seemingly irreconcilable traditions, the suggestion has been made, and it seems to us a plausible one, that, from the fact that all the lower German districts near or bordering on the Netherlands, use the "Low Dutch," as distinguished from the "High Dutch" or German language, to a great extent may have arisen the misconception in the minds of some of our ancestors that Adam came from Holland: i. e., his speech proclaimed him a "Low Dutchman," while his nationality was really "High Dutch" or German. The facts must also not be overlooked that, by inter-marriages, the head of the House of Runkle and the ruling family of Holland were closely allied.

Leaving the reader to cipher out for himself or herself the home land of our ancestor, we will proceed with the story of his life.

The Runkles of the past, like those of the present day, carried out the Bible injunction, to increase and multiply: a family of a dozen being considered of hardly more than average size. As a consequence of this prolificness and of the law of primogeniture, the prestige and property which made up the inheritance of the first-born were exceedingly small or entirely wanting in the portions of the younger children. The father of our emigrating ancestor, owing to the above unfortunate conditions, in his noble descent from some earlier head of the family, had almost reached the bottom of the aristocratic scale. About all he had to show for his illustrious ancestry was the "von" in front of his name, which carried with it no other significance than that, socially, the family "had seen better days," and that his branch had struck bottom. While thus so poorly off as to title, with regard to fortune the Fates had been a little more auspicious; for it is said the father of Adam Runkle was a man of considerable property. Our emigrant ancestor, however, was unfortunately a younger son, and at his father's death, except as to the "von" we have mentioned, inherited very little, if anything, and found himself a pensioner upon his brother's parsimonious bounty. He was only a child when his father died; but he was so filled with a sense of the injustice at being deprived of what he considered his rightful share in the estate, that he determined to make his way to America—the land of promise, to which so many of the neighboring youth had already emigrated. There is a tradition that several of his brothers, at the same or at a previous time, had also bidden adieu to their fatherland. Be this as it may, somewhere between 1735 and 1745—the exact time cannot be determined—Adam Runkle, then a lad not quite sixteen, knowing that his friends would refuse their consent to his making so long, and, at that time, so difficult a journey as the one to America, ran away from home, and, having joined a party bound for the same goal, with what money he had in a belt around his waist and with his other worldly possessions on his back, trudged his weary way, as one tradition has it, the two hundred miles necessary to reach the nearest point whence he could take passage to the Colonies. The particular ports from and to which our ancestor sailed, it has been impossible to determine; but as Philadelphia was at that time the great haven for German emigrants, it is not unlikely that he there first trod the soil of his adopted country. In conflict with the tradition of his having money with him, is another to the effect that, upon his arrival, his time was sold to pay for his passage. Whatever be the right of the matter, certain it is that we now lose sight of him until about the year 1749, when, married to Mary Youngblood, we find him living, on his father-in-law's farm, in Old Amwell, New Jersey, near what is now the village of Wertsville.

Mary Youngblood, the ancestress of the New Jersey Runkles, was a daughter of John Youngblood, a well-to-do farmer, who had made his home in New Jersey a number of years before. Besides Mary, Mr. Youngblood had three other children: a son, John, who never married, and lived most probably at home; a daughter, Elizabeth, who married John Boss, a farmer, living near what is now Ringoes; and a daughter, Charity, wife of William Fisher, who was also a farmer, living in the vicinity of his father-in-law.

Several years after his marriage Adam removed to a farm in Lebanon Township, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, which was afterward owned, about 1800, by Tunis Cramer, and still later by Adam's grandson, John Runkle. There in a log-house, which was standing within the writer's remembrance, our progenitor made his home for several years. At that time—between the years 1755 and 1765—the country was to a great extent in its primeval condition. Noble forests of oak, hickory, chestnut, and other native woods extended over hill and valley as far as the eye could reach. The only breaks in their majestic sweep were those made by the occasional clearings, in which nestled the primitive homes of the settlers; but the work of cutting off the timber and of giving the fertile soil to the ploughshare, owing to the influx of Germans, rapidly progressed. Churches were erected, better houses took the places of the earlier log-cabins, roads were laid out, and the entire country steadily advanced on the highway of prosperity. During this period, through hard work and by strict economy, our ancestor managed to save sufficient money with which to purchase a farm of his own. He selected a tract nearly adjoining the one on which he had been living.

The deed for this property, bearing date December 15, 1761, states that the indenture was made "Between Mahlon Kirkbride of Makefield in the County of Bucks and Province of Pennsylvania, yeoman, and Mary his wife, of the first part, and Adam Runcle of Lebanon in the County of Hunterdon and Western Division of the Province of New Jersey, yeoman, of the second part." After a preliminary description of title, the deed further states that "Mahlon Kirkbride for and in consideration of the sum of Four Hundred and Seventy-two Pounds Ten Shillings current proclamation money of West Jersey to him in Hand paid by the said Adam Runcle," etc., conveyed to said Adam Runcle two hundred and twenty-five acres of land, strict measure, situated in Lebanon Township, Hunterdon County, N. J., on the Great Road leading from the South Branch of Raritan River to Potters Town.*

On the tract referred to, near a large spring and surrounded by sheltering hills, our ancestor built himself a home. The main portion of the story-and-a-half house, erected so many years ago, is still standing and in an excellent state of preservation. Within, on the ground floor, is a narrow hallway, on the left of which, with its low ceiling crossed by heavy timbers, was the sacred spare room, opened only on occasions of state, and when the Runkle girls had particular company. In the rear, with entrances both from the front room and from the hall, was Adam's bedchamber. The stairs leading to the floor above are exceedingly steep and narrow, and the four rooms thereon, with their sloping, wide board ceilings, are the same as when the house was first built. The extension, originally on the right, contained a large kitchen, and back of it the weaving-room. In the latter apartment was placed the old-fashioned loom, on which the women of the household exhibited their industry and skill. This part of the house, becoming very much decayed, was torn down about the year 1830, and a new kitchen was erected on the left. The main building, however, with its small windows and its old-fashioned rooms, must look much as it did in that long ago when our ancestors there played as children.

In the old farm-house, we have endeavored to describe, grew up, around the stalwart father, a large family of sons and daughters. There he saw his children gradually pass into manhood and womanhood, marry and start out to fight life's battles for themselves. There, too, as his hair became whiter and whiter with the frosts of age, a grandsire, he was again surrounded by little ones, and a second time the old home echoed with children's voices. Thus, forgetful of the troubled years of youth, Adam Runkle peacefully passed through life's eventide to its closing. He died in the fall of 1800, and was laid to rest on the hill to the northward and overlooking the home where he had lived so happily and so long. Mary, his wife, survived him about five years, and they are buried side by side. Marked only by large, flat field-stones, with nothing thereon to indicate who are the sleepers, for nearly a century now they there have slumbered.

Adam Runkle was naturally very reticent: a trait which has, no doubt, unfortunately deprived us of much interesting information concerning his youth and his early home. Immediately upon his arrival in America he dropped from his name the "von," which, while betokening his social standing, was also a constant reminder of its accompanying injustice. Concerning his childhood surroundings, his early life and family, his lips were tightly sealed; but despite his effort to blot out all remembrance of those early days and their associations, many of the social usages of that far-off German home had become so deeply fixed in his life, that, in after years, their rigid observance in his own family was strenuously insisted on. Among these were especially noticeable certain small matters regarding table etiquette and the strictness with which he enforced the rule excluding children from the family board with their elders.

As a disciplinarian the subject of our sketch was over-strict. All forms of innocent amusement that did not contain at least a soupçon of the religious element were frowned upon. The result of this too strong repression was that the Runkle boys, whenever possible, obtained by stealth those pleasures of the young, placed thus indiscriminately under the parental ban. In after years these, our guileful forefathers, were fond of narrating how, when invited to some neighboring merry-making, they early betook themselves to their rooms, where, removing their boots, they would drop them heavily upon the floor to punctuate the fact of their early retirement; watching their opportunity, they would then, boots in hand, steal stealthily down the outside way and hasten to the place of jollification. There, prime movers in all the games and enjoyments of that day, the hours would quickly fly until the rosy finger of dawn warned them it was time to hasten home. Softly returning to their rooms, they would then hastily get to bed, there to sleep the sleep of innocence until the stern voice of their father, breaking in upon their slumbers, awakened them to a realization of the pleasure of rest and the danger connected with its further enjoyment.

This strain of severity in our ancestor's character, from his son Abraham's account, it would seem was especially visited upon him. In after years he spoke bitterly of his father's tyranny and injustice, while of his mother he had only words of praise. That the relations between father and son were not too cordial, whatever the cause may have been, would seem to be evinced by Adam's will. In it Abraham, while sharing equally with the other children in real estate, was not mentioned in the division of the personalty. In addition, he was the only one of the sons not named as an executor in that instrument.

During the dark days of the Revolution, Adam Runkle was a zealous, outspoken patriot. It is narrated that so anxious was he to further the country's cause that, with Peter Aller assisting, he took Matthias Cramer to Jones' Tavern, and sought to induce him to enter the Federal service. Mr. Cramer, however, was enfeebled with consumption, and that fact becoming speedily apparent to the army surgeon, he ordered Cramer's release. From that time he declined rapidly in health, and died in 1783. Thus it was that our ancestor's efforts for his country's welfare were frustrated by fate, and the descendants of Mr. Cramer were shut out from becoming Sons and Daughters of the Revolution.

Why Adam did not himself enter the army, or show the same earnestness in securing the enlistment of his own sons, old enough to bear arms, we do not know. The anecdote we have given, however, shows most conclusively how actively aroused were his sympathies for his country's welfare.

The last will and testament of Adam Runkle,* before referred to, bears date the 5th day of July, 1791, but was not probated until February 4, 1801. The inventory of the personal estate, which the will directed to be made as soon as convenient after the testator's death, is dated November 17, 1800, and it is reasonable to suppose that his death occurred but a short time before the last-mentioned date.

To Adam and Mary Runkel there were born eight children:

2. i. Mary
3. ii. John

* Copy of the will of Adam Runkle and of the inventory of his personal property are given in full in Appendix.

4. iii. William
5. iv. Abraham
6. v. Sarah
7. vi. Jacob
8. vii. Margaret
9. viii. Adam

2. MARY, the oldest child of Adam and Mary Runkle, was born about the year 1750, probably on the farm of her grandfather Youngblood in Amwell. Most of her life, however, up to the time of her marriage, was spent on the homestead in Lebanon Township. There, as the years passed by, she took from her mother's shoulders the burden of many household cares. The younger members of the family, too, it is safe to presume, looked to her as their main support in childish frolic and as the arbiter of their differences. For many years she remained her mother's helper and companion, and when, long after the glamour of early youth had passed away, she married Abraham Wagoner, it was probably not without a strong feeling of sadness she left the old home, with its early associations, for that of her husband. Mr. Wagoner, born about 1762, was many years younger than his wife, and resided on a farm near what is now known as Stanton, N. J. On this farm, a few miles from her old home, Mary resided until her husband's death, February 16, 1811, after which she made her home with her second daughter at Ringoes, N. J. As time rolled on the once tall and erect form became bent with the weight of years, and the step feeble and tottering. Finally, worn out in mind and body, she died, January 6, 1833, at the advanced age of eighty-two years. Her remains rest by those of her husband, in the village graveyard, near Stanton. Mary Runkle had three children:

10. i. Mary
11. ii. Catharine
12. iii. Sarah

3. JOHN, the second child of Adam and Mary Runkle, was born August 29, 1752, most probably on the old Amwell farm near Wertsville. While he was yet a child his father purchased and removed to the farm near what is now Annandale, N. J.; but John remained, at least during a portion of his boyhood, at his grandfather's place in Amwell, spending, however, his Sundays with his aunt, Mrs. Boss, near Ringoes.

John Runkel—he adhered to the original spelling of the name—was twice married: first, December 2, 1775, to Hannah, daughter of Henry Graff of Ringoes; and second, on March 25, 1816, to her niece, Rebecca, daughter of Henry Landis and widow of John Runyon. During the lifetime of his first wife the subject of our sketch resided on a farm now owned by Theodore Anderson, and located about a mile from Flemington, N. J. By his first wife, and on this farm, his ten children were born.

Rebecca, his second wife, was born May 9, 1761, and died May 31, 1850. Upon his marriage to her John purchased the farm at Ringoes, N. J., now occupied by William Brown; and there it was the remaining years of his long and honored life were spent. He died April 22, 1846, and with his two wives rests in the Landis burying-ground at Ringoes. Only a rough hewn field-stone, selected and prepared by himself many years before, marks his resting-place; but, to all who knew him, the nobility of his life was an enduring monument.

John Runkel was a man a little under medium height and of rather heavy build. In manner he was quiet and as kind and tender-hearted as a woman. Though not a member, he was a regular and devout attendant on the services of the "Free Will Baptists." The life of this, the first-born son of the New Jersey House of Runkle, was one of which his descendants may be justly proud, for it was that of a high-toned, true-hearted, Christian gentleman. His children were:

13. i. Adam
14. ii. Henry
15. iii. Mary
16. iv. Sarah
17. v. William
18. vi. Ann
19. vii. John
20. viii. Elisha
21. ix. Eleanor
22. x. Elizabeth

4. William, the third child of Adam Runkle, was born in the year 1755. We have no particular record of his early life, but know that he was a sturdy, well-built lad, full of life and spirits, who, with his love for frolic, united an ability and willingness to work which rendered him a valuable assistant to his father on the farm. In time, however, younger brothers coming of age rendered it necessary for him to start out for himself. In the course of his rides about the country he had noticed the well-timbered, fertile lands in the Musconetcong Valley, and determined there to make his home. He purchased a farm in Mansfield Township, Sussex (now Warren) County, N. J., and about the same time sought and won the heart and hand of Susanna Dawson. The young lady whom he had chosen for his wife was born in 1769, and consequently was only sixteen years of age when, on November 20, 1785, the Rev. John Hanna* united her in marriage to her tall and handsome lover. The young husband immediately built himself a home, and worked early and late on the farm he had purchased, clearing it of bushes and cutting off the surplus timber, until he soon had it well under cultivation. Year after year rolled by, and he added to his landed and other possessions, until, by his ability and thrift, he became, for those days, a man of considerable wealth.

For over a quarter of a century William and Susanna Runkle happily spent their quiet, uneventful lives together, and then, yielding to a fever with which she had been stricken, the gentle, loving wife and mother laid down life's burdens, and, on August

* Rev. John Hanna in 1761 succeeded Rev. Thos. Lewis as pastor of the "Old Frame Bethlehem Church"—afterward known as "The New Stone"—near Hunts Mills, now Clinton, N. J. In 1762 he married Mary, daughter of Rev. James McCrea and sister of the lovely Jane McCrea whose murder by the Indians during the Revolution sent a thrill of horror throughout the country. Mr. Hanna was a very active man, and, in addition to his duties as pastor of three congregations, of Bethlehem, Kingwood, and Alexandria, practiced medicine quite extensively, and also for many years managed a farm in Alexandria. He died, while in charge of the Bethlehem church, November 4, 1801. It was at this church that Adam Runkle and his family regularly attended service.

2, 1817, quietly passed away. The husband could not be persuaded to leave the home where so many happy years of his life had been spent; and there, with his children and grandchildren around him, almost imperceptibly the shadows of life's closing crept over him. His summons from earth came on Tuesday morning, November 5, 1839, and he was laid to rest in the old Mansfield burying-ground, near Washington, N. J., by the side of the wife whose call had come so many years before, and where two of his children, the eldest and the youngest, who had preceded him to the eternal world, were also buried.

"Squire Billy," as he was familiarly called, besides being a successful farmer, was also an able surveyor, and no doubt himself ran the boundaries of each new property he determined to purchase. He was of a genial disposition, very fond of humor, and a man who exercised a remarkable influence in the neighborhood of his home. In the latter years of his life he was a great victim of the gout, the severe twinges of which, we can readily believe, tended to modify his love of pleasantry and to steal from his declining years many of the sweets which go far toward making life the better worth living.

In appearance William Runkle was a tall, handsome man, of magnificent physique. His hair, which was of unusual thickness, with added years became perfectly white, and worn cut comparatively short was combed straight up from the forehead. This, adding to his seeming height, with his distinguished appearance and courtly, old-school manners, proclaimed him in truth "ye olde tyme" gentleman. He had four children:

23. i. Daniel
24. ii. Mary
25. iii. Adam D.
26. iv. Joseph

5. ABRAHAM, Adam Runkle's fourth child, was born January 14, 1757. His childhood and youth were spent on his father's farm near Annandale. We know nothing concerning this period of his life, but it is safe to presume that, like his brothers, he did a full share of each day's work. As many of his relatives and friends were in Amwell, he, no doubt, frequently visited there, and thus became acquainted with Sarah Stout,* born April 4, 1756, and to whom, on April 19, 1779, he was married. He purchased a farm in West Amwell Township, Hunterdon County, N. J., about a mile south of the present village of

* Concerning Sarah, wife of Abraham Runkle, we have the following anecdotes: She was exceedingly domestic in her tastes, and very seldom went from home. On one of those rare occasions, while on her way to visit relatives living at a distance, she had her husband stop at some neighbors', about a mile away, and earnestly requested them to keep an eye on the chimney of her home—it being all that was visible—as she feared the building might burn during her absence.

At one period of her life she became thoroughly possessed with the idea that she was going to die. Though in good physical health, she would immediately take to her bed and send a summons for her husband and friends to hear her last wishes; then, with a truly melancholy relish, she would give her dying directions, interlarded with many pious exhortations. At first the sadness of the whole affair brought to the sorrowing friends its full weight of woe: their tears seemed to whet the appetite of the departing one for this kind of enjoyment, and thereafter she frequently gratified this morbid taste. Finally her dying became so monotonous, that her husband determined to try and break her of so deleterious a habit. Not long after his resolution had been taken, he was one day summoned from the field with the accustomed announcement, "Mother is dying again, and wants you to come in right away." He went; and, as he entered the room, saw his wife lying on the bed, presumably on the verge of dissolution, and only awaiting the arrival of the long-suffering husband in order to begin with her last wishes. As soon as she saw him, she said: "Oh, Abram! I'm going to die; I know I'm going to die: and what will become Wertsville, now owned by Vandyke Blackwell; and there, in the neighborhood where his mother's girlhood days had been spent, following the quiet routine of a farmer's life, one after another the milestones of vigorous manhood and old age were passed, until, having left far behind him the full allotment of four-score years, on April 11, 1845, his journey of life came to an end. He was buried in the old cemetery about half a mile from Wertsville; and upon the death of his wife, December 29, 1847, her remains were placed beside him. Abraham had four children:

27. i. Mary
28. ii. Elizabeth
29. iii. Margaret
30. iv. John Y.

6. SARAH was born February 15, 1761. In the old-fashioned farm-house of her father, nestled be-of the poor children?" Her husband, with a brutally cheerful face, consolingly replied: "Don't worry about them, mother; they'll be well taken care of. I've thought all about that, and have concluded to marry Mary Jane Smith." Now, this Mary Jane Smith was a meddlesome, gossipy old maid of the neigborhood, who bore a not too enviable reputation, and a person whom, above all others, the good wife thoroughly abhorred. As soon as Abraham had unfolded his comforting plan, Sarah, with health fully restored, but temper as surely gone, began to get out of bed, at the same time giving her luckless spouse a far different style of exhortation than had been her original intention. "What!" she said, "you marry that hussy? Let me tell you, Abram Runkle, she shall never be the mother of my children."

Profiting by the entirely too satisfactory results of her last dying experience, Mrs. Runkle did not again summon her friends to her death-bed until after her husband's departure, when, feeling assured that he was safe from Mary Jane's tenacious clutches, she was resigned to leave the world in which she had remained so long from a sense of duty to her children.

We do not wish it to be understood from the above anecdote that Sarah Runkle made her husband and family unhappy, for such is not the case: she was a devoted, faithful wife, and loving, tender mother. The melancholia with which, for a time, she was troubled gradually passed away; and, for many years before her death, all that remained in the memory of her friends concerning it was the story we have told, which, no doubt, was considered too good to sink into oblivion.

tween the Jersey hills, she grew up a tall and slender maiden, skilled in all domestic duties, and hearing only faint echoes of the strife then waging between the Colonies and the mother country. Many of the pleasures, which seem so necessary to the young lives of to-day, were unthought of in that long ago, and even the quilting bees and apple frolics, then so much in vogue, were for Sarah and her sisters seldom tasted though much-coveted joys. Thus, with only religious services to break the even tenor of her life's existence, this gentle, quiet girl passed the years of youth and early womanhood.

From the beginning of 1787, at the meetings we have mentioned, the stalwart form and handsome face of young Aaron Van Buskirk with increasing frequency began to be seen. He was born October 10, 1763, and at the time we mention had already arrived at that period of manhood when in the human breast the fires of love are most easily kindled. His father lived near Trenton, N. J., and as, on his faithful steed, the young man so regularly put in an appearance at the services in "The Old Frame Bethlehem Church" (now called "The New Stone"), people began to seek a reason for his religious devotion; nor were they long in arriving at a solution of the problem, for soon it was discovered that on the women's benches he had found a magnet far more attractive than the parson's* long discourses. At the same time the tell-tale flush upon Miss Sarah's cheek proved that thoughts of heaven had not entirely freed her mind from thoughts of earth; and when the tedious services were at last concluded, many a pleasant hour, no doubt, they spent together at the noon recess strolling under the trees of the neighboring grove. How swiftly passed the time as they chatted there about their week-day toils and of the growing attachments of their young companions! Soon their own future, we can feel assured, engrossed their thoughts, and thus the old, old story, ever new, again found repetition. However near the truth may be these, our surmises, as to the birth of their friendship and its change to love, we know that the affection Sarah kindled in young Aaron's breast burned so fiercely that his lips were soon compelled to give it utterance. No clouds, no frowning of stern parents obscured the happiness of our lovers, and on January 7, 1788, their marriage vows were spoken. Aaron took his bride to a home near the present village of Milford, N. J., and later purchased and removed to a farm in what was then known as the Pequest Valley, in that part of Sussex since set off as Warren County, N. J. On this farm, near the present village of Danville, cheered by the company of their two sturdy boys, Aaron and Sarah Van Buskirk traveled life's pathway together until March 19, 1825, when the death angel claimed the husband and father, and left the hearth-stone desolate. The remaining years of Mrs. Van Buskirk's life were spent at the home of her then surviving son. It was at his house, at that time in Belvidere, N. J., that on April 12, 1846, she received her call from earth. To this event, always a sad one, the tragic manner of its occurrence gave additional grief to those who knew and loved her. By reason of the infirmities which age had placed upon her, Mrs. Van Buskirk, for a considerable period previous to her death, remained for the greater part of the time in her room, and was, while retaining possession of her mental faculties, to a great extent helpless. On the last day of her life, while alone in her apartment, and supposably dozing in her chair before the open grate, in some manner her clothing caught fire, and, ere assistance could arrive, so badly was she burned that in a very few hours death relieved her from her sufferings. She was buried by the side of her husband in the old village graveyard by the Danville Church, where, unmindful of the changes which have swept from the face of nature all vestige of the home in which so many of the hopes, the joys, and sorrows of her life had found their birth and their fruition, for half a century, she now has been at rest.

To this worthy couple, whose lives we have so briefly outlined, were born three children:

31. i. Nancy
32. ii. Daniel
33. iii. John

7. Jacob, the next child of the emigrant, was born on his father's farm near Annandale, in the year 1763 or 1764, and, like his brothers, was early put to work; like them, too, he seldom enjoyed, unless it was without his father's consent, pleasures more exhilarating than those obtained while in attendance at the religious services held in the meeting-houses of the neighborhood.

It was a general custom for the young people of the last century to faithfully appear at all "the preachings" held within a considerable radius of their homes. At that time churches were not so numerous nor meetings as frequent as in our day. The time before the morning service and at the noon recess was generally spent in greeting friends, making new acquaintances, and in social converse. It was then that the country's welfare was discussed, the neighborhood news circulated, and the state of the crops passed upon. It also not unfrequently happened that the less godly young men improved this opportunity to exchange horses—"swapping" they called it; the young girls exchanged confidences, and the young lovers vows. We thus see that, at these meetings which our forefathers attended, the spiritual and worldly affairs of the congregation were strangely commingled. It was, no doubt, while attending services similar to those described, in the Reformed meeting-house in what is now Lebanon, N. J., that Jacob Runkle became acquainted with "Effy" Eick. Euphemia Eick, born November 21, 1772, was the daughter of Philip Eick, a farmer living about a mile and a half to the northward of New Germantown, N. J., and who, it is said, holding a commission in the Revolutionary Army, took part in the Battle of Monmouth.

Jacob soon began paying his addresses to the young girl we have mentioned, and being successful in his suit, on May 26, 1791, he was married. The young husband remained on or in the vicinity of his father's place near Annandale until after the deaths of his parents. He then, on June 29, 1805, purchased the homestead from the acting executors of his father's estate, and there continued to reside until his own death, September 8, 1824. His wife survived him a little over ten years, passing away December 17, 1834. They are buried side by side in the same private graveyard with his parents.

Jacob Runkle was of medium height and slightly heavy set. He was a good farmer, and by his thrift, and possibly rather too strict economy, succeeded in raising a large family, and besides in saving a considerable competence.

"Effy" Runkle was a tall, large, and fine-looking woman, of far more than the average intelligence, and much of her husband's success, no doubt, was due to her capable management.

To this couple were born thirteen children:

34. i. Philip
35. ii. John E.
36. iii. Mary
37. iv. Susan
38. v. Catharine
39. vi. Sallie
40. vii. Jesse
41. viii. Eliza
42. ix. Ralph E.
43. x. William
44. xi. Abraham
45. xii. Euphemia C.
46. xiii. Sarah

8. MARGARET, born in 1765, passed the early years of her life in much the same uneventful fashion as did her brothers and sisters. When it was she first met young Jacob Gearhart we do not know, but certain it is that the slight, gentle mannered youth was not long in storming the citadel of "Peggy's" affections. Jacob, born in 1763, was a son of that Jacob who ten years before came over from Rotterdam in the good ship "Patience." Jacob, Senior, settled in Warren County, N. J., and during the Revolution rendered valuable service to his country's cause. He later removed to Northumberland County, Penn., where he died in 1813. It might have been his father's removal to the "Keystone State" that caused Jacob, Junior, to also turn his steps in that direction. Be this as it may, about 1793, a few years after his marriage, he purchased four hundred acres of land covered with forests, about a mile from the present town of Danville, Penn., where, having built himself a home, he continued to reside until his death.

In appearance Margaret Runkle much resembled her sisters; she was quiet and unassuming, and to her husband proved ever a faithful, loving wife and helpmate. She died September 30, 1843, and is buried in Mt. Vernon Cemetery, not far from her home.

Jacob Gearhart was in appearance a little under medium height, and was rather fastidious in his dress. He always wore a ruffled shirt and a cut-away coat, which latter, toward the close of his life, conformed in make to the Quaker fashion. In addition to his old-time style of dressing, Jacob Gearhart wore a white fur hat, which still more attracted attention to the wearer. He was very fond of fine horses, and on his visits to the New Jersey friends always drove a handsome span. He was a very influential man in his community, and for many years was associate judge of Northumberland County. In religion he was an ardent Methodist, and often, though not a licensed preacher, would lead the services, reading and explaining the Scriptures. His home was the stopping-place of ministers of all denominations; and in the old barn, still standing, Bishop Asbury, the first Methodist Episcopal Bishop in the United States, once preached. Connected with Mr. Gearhart's family by blood and marriage are sixty preachers and wives of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Politically the subject of this sketch was a strong Democrat; and it was at his house that Andrew Jackson, while President of the United States, requested Simon Cameron to get the Pennsylvania delegation committed to the support of Martin Van Buren.

Mr. Gearhart, during the closing years of his life, was quite a sufferer from dyspepsia; and on his visits to his friends, as a guard against his dread enemy, he always carried his own bread with him. He died August 2, 1841; and at his funeral, as the large procession of his friends and neighbors followed his remains to their last resting-place in the near-by churchyard, all solemnly joined in singing a hymn to the tune of "Old Hundred." For over half a century the old Judge (as he was called) and his wife have been sleeping in that quiet burial-place; but the sweet, pervading influence of their lives still continues, and the religious seed sown by them so often in the days gone by has brought forth more than a hundred-fold.

To this couple there were born three children:

47. i. John
48. ii. Jacob
49. iii. Harmon

9. ADAM was born on the homestead farm in Hunterdon County, N. J., January 18, 1766. While yet a young man he went to Warren (then a part of Sussex County, N. J.), where he resided, no doubt, for a time with his brother William, who had previously settled there. Later he purchased property in the vicinity of the present village of Asbury, near his brother's home, and there set up his household gods. After spending a number of years in bachelor freedom, he was won from his lonely state by the young daughter of John Richey. Sarah Richey, born December 3, 1786, was over twenty years her husband's junior. Upon the death of her father she inherited a fine farm in the Musconetcong Valley, to which her husband largely added by purchasing from her sister, Mrs. Dunham, an adjoining property.

By this time Adam Runkle had become the owner of several large tracts of land, the cultivation of which was carried on, most probably, by slaves, of which he owned a number, but under his immediate supervision and direction.

In addition to the management of his farm, the subject of this sketch was also a merchant, a surveyor, and a general man of affairs.

He was one of the charter members of Olive Branch Lodge, No. 16, of Free Masons, which received a warrant from the Grand Lodge of New Jersey on January 9, 1799. This lodge continued an active body until 1830; after that it languished until 1842, when it was stricken from the roll of New Jersey lodges.

About 1811 Adam removed to Clarksville (Glen Gardner), N. J., and, toward the close of his life, to Easton, Penn., where he died, October 18, 1850, at the ripe old age of eighty-four years and nine months. He was buried in the First Presbyterian Churchyard at Easton; but after the death of his widow, which occurred January 12, 1878, his remains were removed to the Burke burial-plot in the Easton Cemetery, where, side by side, the husband and wife are now sleeping.

Adam Runkle was a man of medium height, thick-set (like his brother John), of a jovial disposition, communicative, and given to pleasantries in conversation. A man of unusual intelligence, he was most highly respected by the entire community in which he lived.

Two daughters were his only offspring; and to them he gave the best educational advantages. At that time Philadelphia was the center of refinement; and therefore in a boarding-school in that city he placed his children: taking and bringing them himself in the large family carriage, and frequently stopping, on his way thither or on the homeward journey, to spend a night with his brother John in Amwell.

The two children of Adam Runkle were:

50. i. Eliza
51. ii. Matilda

Children of 2 Mary (Adam[1])

Children of 3 John (Adam[1])

13. ADAM was born Oct. 11, 1776, and on June 29, 1800, married Ellen Cool. Like his father, he also had ten children. About 1825 he removed from Flemington to Ithaca, N. Y., where he continued to follow his trade, that of a carpenter. He later removed to Morrisville, N. Y., where he engaged in farming. He died Jan. 8, 1870, and his wife Ellen, Sept. 3, 1874. They are both buried at Morrisville, N. Y. Their children were:

76. x. Richard Holcombe

14. HENRY, b. Feb. 28, 1778, d. Oct. 22, 1865. He married, Dec. 8, 1802, Elizabeth Rea, b. Aug. 22, 1785, d. July 1, 1856; lived on a farm on the outskirts of Flemington, N. J., and is buried in the Presbyterian graveyard of the town. He had nine children:

77. i. Rea
78. ii. Sarah Ann
79. iii. Susan
80. iv. William
81. v. Mary
82. vi. Adaline
83. vii. Joseph
84. viii. Lewis
85. ix. Jane G.

15. MARY, b. Sept. 20, 1779, d. Oct. 26, 1871. She married, Dec. 5, 1808, Elnathan Moore, b. Sept. 24, 1784, d. May 2, 1856. Many years ago Mr. Moore was proprietor of the old Flemington Tavern, the site of which was at the angle of the two roads near the Presbyterian Church. The closing years of Mr. Moore's life were spent at Ten Mile Run, N. J. After his death his widow removed to New Brunswick, N. J., where she resided for the remainder of her days. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are both buried at Kingston, N. J. They had six children:

86. i. Hannah
87. ii. William R.
88. iii. Austin G.
89. iv. Hart
90. v. John R.
91. vi. Charles B.

16. SARAH, b. Feb. 3, 1781, d. Jan. 21, 1836. On Nov. 25, 1802, she married Richard Holcombe, b. Sept. 1, 1783, d. Dec. 14, 1859. They resided near and are buried at Lambertville. They had six children:

92. i. Mary Ann
93. ii. John R.
94. iii. Alfred
95. iv. Amanda
96. v. Charles Wesley
97. vi. Thomas

17. WILLIAM, b. Sept. 16, 1782, m. Aug. 17, 1807, Mary Waldron. He was a merchant in Flemington, N. J., and is buried at Ringoes. The date of his death is not known. He had one child:

98. i. Hannah

18. ANN, b. Aug. 29, 1784, d. Feb. 24, 1831. On March 21, 1812, she married Richard Choyce, b. May 29, 1784, d. Jan. 21, 1860. She is buried near Trenton, N. J. Her five children were:

99. i. Thomas Capner

100. ii. William
101. iii. Rebecca
102. iv. John Hall
103. v. Richard

19. JOHN, b. ——, 1789, d. April 1, 1822. He was twice married: first, to Ann Choyce, b. March 17, 1791, d. Dec. 21, 1811; and second, Nov. 16, 1814, to Mary Cherry. By his first wife he had one child, and by the second two children. He was a farmer, and, after his father's removal from Flemington, took the farm himself. He is buried in the Presbyterian graveyard in that town. His children were:

104. i. Ann
105. ii. Elizabeth
106. iii. Richard H.

20. ELISHA, b. Oct. 22, 1790, d. Feb. 20, 1888. He married Anna Thatcher, who died Nov. 19, 1834. He was a farmer, and lived near Cherryville, N. J., at which place he is buried. He had eleven children:

107. i. Catharine
108. ii. Margaret
109. iii. Daniel T.
110. iv. Sidney
111. v. Jane E.
112. vi. Charles Frazer
113. vii. Hopy
114. viii. Stephen Decatur
115. ix. Sylvanus
116. x. Mary } Twins
117. xi. Ellen }

21. ELEANOR, b. Aug. 24, 1793, d. July 16, 1869. She married March 2, 1814, Thomas S. Cherry, b. May 26, 1792, d. Jan. 15, 1878. They resided on a farm near Flemington, and had ten children:

118. i. John R.
119. ii. William R.
120. iii. Hannah R.
121. iv. Watson
122. v. Rachel Ann
123. vi. Francis C.
124. vii. Ellen C.
125. viii. Jane Louisa
126. ix. Mary M.
127. x. Edwin

22. ELIZABETH, b. May 22, 1796, d. April 12, 1871; she married Thomas Reading, b. Aug. 8, 1793, d. May 17, 1859. They removed, after their marriage, to New York State, and later to Edwardsburg, Mich., near which place they lived for many years on a farm; as old age came on they removed to the village where Mr. Reading died. After her husband's death Mrs. Reading removed to Niles in the same State, and it was there she ended her days. Both Mr. and Mrs. Reading are buried in the cemetery at Edwardsburg. They had three children:

128. i. Catharine
129. ii. John Wesley
130. iii. Edgar

Children of 4 William (Adam[1])

23. DANIEL, born Aug. 31, 1786, died, as the old family record states, Feb. 17, 1818, "of pulmonary complaint which turned into dropsy." He was unmarried, and is buried in the old Mansfield burying-ground.

24. Mary, b. March 9, 1788, d. Dec. 26, 1846, and is buried in the Musconetcong Valley graveyard near Hámpton Junction, N. J. She married Jonathan W. Ingham, and until her father's death resided in a house which he had built on a portion of the Mansfield farm which he gave to her. When her father died she purchased the homestead, and there, in her childhood's home, the remaining years of her life were spent. Mr. Ingham was born June 20, 1785, was of Quaker stock, and a man of great intelligence. His information, however, was that derived from books rather than of a practical, business character. After the death of his wife, he removed to the West, where he died April 25, 1863. He is buried at Mt. Etna, Ind. Mary Ingham had eight children:

131. i. William Runkle
132. ii. Samuel D.
133. iii. Jonathan
134. iv. Susan R.
135. v. Sarah Ann
136. vi. Charles Kinsey
137. vii. Margaret R.
138. viii. Jane R.

25. Adam Dawson, born December 20, 1789, married February 15, 1821, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Kennedy of Stewartsville, N. J. Margaret Kennedy Runkle, b. January 4, 1800, had hardly passed the threshold of her married life ere, at the birth of a little daughter, her gentle eyes were closed in death. She passed away March 24, 1828. After the death of his wife the husband tried as best as he could to make up to his little ones for the loss of their mother's tender care. During the short span of his married life, and for a couple of years thereafter, Mr. Runkle resided in Bloomsbury, N. J.; but about 1830, when his brother Joseph removed to the village of Asbury, at the earnestly expressed desire of his father, he returned to the homestead, and there remained until his father's death. Adam then again took up his residence in Bloomsbury, where, in addition to keeping a store, he owned and directed several other interests. From time to time he also purchased large tracts of land in and about the village, and, like his father before him, was a man of wealth.

In appearance Adam D. Runkle was a tall, fine-looking gentleman of the old school, who, with his white hair, stately carriage, and gentle and unselfish disposition, commanded the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He was a man of far more than ordinary intelligence, a great reader, and especially fond of those branches of science which could be turned to practical account. After the marriage of his daughter, with only a housekeeper to look after his home, he still continued to reside at Bloomsbury. There, after the business of the day was done, he would shut himself in his room, and among the books he loved so well, casting aside life's cares and worriments, live a life of quiet contentment. Thus peacefully passed the autumn of his days, until warned by the infirmities of age, and urged by the solicitations of his daughter, he yielded a reluctant consent to make his home with her. There it was, that, after so many useful years, on February 14, 1873, his gentle spirit winged its flight to the better land. He is buried in the Eastern Cemetery. Adam D. Runkle had two children:

139. i. William
140. ii. Margaret Kennedy

26. Joseph, b. Feb. 15, 1792, m. in 1820 Jane Stewart, who was born Dec. 25, 1803, at Hackettstown, N. J., and died May 8, 1879. The first ten years of Joseph's married life were spent on his father's farm in Mansfield Township; he then removed to the village of Asbury, where, with Cornelius Stewart, he carried on a mercantile business. At the same time with his removal to Asbury, he purchased a farm about a mile and a half north-east of the village, the tilling of which he directed personally. He died Feb. 29, 1836, and lies near his parents in the old Mansfield burying-ground.

Joseph Runkle was an unusually handsome man: tall, of fine presence, dignified, very generous, fond of humor, and held in highest regard by all who knew him. He had one son:

141. i. Daniel

Children of 5 Abraham (Adam[1])

27. Mary, b. July 27, 1780, d. Aug. 3, 1868. She married William H. Wert, b. July 6, 1773, d. Feb. 14, 1839. Mr. Wert was a farmer, and himself and wife are buried in the old graveyard at Larason's Corners, N. J. They had eleven children:

142. i. Sarah
143. ii. Elizabeth

144. iii. Abraham
145. iv. Caroline
146. v. Christopher
147. vi. John W.
148. vii. Mary
149. viii. David S.
150. ix. Susan
151. x. Christiana
152. xi. Mary 2d.

28. ELIZABETH, b. Oct. 30, 1782, d. April 5, 1868. She married George Rea, b. ——, 1774, d. June 27, 1838. Mr. Rea was born and raised near Pittstown, N. J. He was a clock and watch maker by trade, and carried on his occupation at Princeton, Trenton, and later at Flemington. During the latter portion of his life he devoted his time to farming and milling, having erected a grist-mill on Sand Brook. There he made his home, and spent the remaining years of his life. He was for a long period, about twenty years, one of the judges of the county court. Being of a jovial disposition, Judge Rea was liked and respected by all with whom he came in contact. Mr. and Mrs. Rea are both buried in the Baptist graveyard at Flemington. They had nine children:

153. i. Mary Ann
154. ii. Runkle
155. iii. Peter C. } Twins
156. iv. Joseph B. }
157. v. Clara Leak
158. vi. Amanda Melrina
159. vii. Amanda Melrina 2d
160. viii. Elizabeth
161. ix. George Augustus

29. MARGARET, b. June 7, 1785, d. March 22, 1869. She married Albert S. Cox, b. Dec. 23, 1780, d. Jan. 2, 1853. Mr. Cox was born at Somerville, N. J., where he resided for several years after his marriage. He then purchased and removed to a large farm west of Flemington, where the remaining years of his life were spent. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are buried in the Presbyterian graveyard at Flemington. They had four children:

162. i. Abraham Runkle
163. ii. Dickinson M. } Twins
164. iii. Peter S. }
165. iv. Sarah M.

30. JOHN Y., b. Nov. 3, 1788, d. Oct. 8, 1857. He married Eliza Higgins, b. Jan. 22, 1793, d. Aug. 1, 1854. Mr. Runkle lived on a farm near Mount Airy, in Hunterdon County, N. J. He owned several large tracts of land, which had been left to him by his father. He had nine children:

166. i. Horatio
167. ii. Abraham
168. iii. Oscar Dunreath
169. iv. Rufus
170. v. Mary
171. vi. William Nelson
172. vii. John Youngblood

174. ix. Lucius Wesley

Children of 6 Sarah (Adam[1])

31. NANCY VAN BUSKIRK died an infant, Dec. 20, 1790.

32. DANIEL VAN BUSKIRK was born Sept. 3, 1790. He grew to manhood on his father's farm near Danville, and on Dec. 23, 1820, married Ann Henry; but he lost her by death on Dec.

31, 1821, one short year after his marriage. On Feb. 2, 1824, he again entered the marriage state, this time with Sarah Hoagland, who was born Feb. 18, 1804, died July 31, 1887. In 1825 he secured a license to keep a hotel in Danville, his home village: and there, in a large, old-fashioned mansion, the traveler ever found abundant hospitality, and in Daniel Van Buskirk a genial, courteous landlord. In addition to his hotel, Mr. Van Buskirk carried on, under the same roof, a general store business, and he was also the first postmaster of his village. The old tavern burned down several years ago, and a modern structure was erected on its site. On Nov. 10, 1845, the subject of this sketch was elected sheriff of his county (Warren), which position he held for the full term of three years, with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his fellow-citizens. He died Oct. 24, 1852, and is buried, by the side of his parents, in the village graveyard at Danville.

Daniel Van Buskirk was a man of considerable prominence and influence in his community. He was of distinguished appearance, and had a generous, happy disposition, which gained for him the love and respect of all who knew him. He had eleven children:

175. i. John
176. ii. James H.
177. iii. Ann
178. iv. Aaron
179. v. William Runkle
180. vi. Luther G.
181. vii. Margaret H.
182. viii. Amanda
183. ix. Sarah
184. x. Daniel D.
185. xi. George

33. JOHN VAN BUSKIRK was born Sept. 20, 1796, and married Lydia Carhart, b. Jan. 18, 1793, d. March 28, 1852. John lived in the vicinity of Milford, N. J., where he died Nov. 11, 1820, at the early age of twenty-four years. He had two children:

186. i. Cornelius
187. ii. Sarah Ann

Children of 7 Jacob (Adam[1])

34. PHILIP, b. June 10, 1792, married Sept. 23, 1815,

Sarah Carhart,* b. Dec. 18, 1794. For a time after his marriage Philip resided near his old home, and afterward removed to the vicinity of Milford, N. J., where, in addition to the cultivation of a farm, he built and operated an oil-mill. In appearance Philip Runkle was of medium height and fine-looking. He died March 8, 1833, while still a young man, and is buried near his father and grandfather in the old family burying-ground near Annandale. Sarah, his wife, survived him very many years, and died Oct. 20, 1873. He had five children:

188. i. Sarah Carhart
189. ii. George Rea
190. iii. Nelson
191. iv. Almira Weston
192. v. John Carhart

35. JOHN E., b. Dec. 16, 1793, d. July 11, 1877. He married Sarah Wert, b. March 14, 1799, d. Aug. 29, 1876. (See No. 142.) Mr. Runkle purchased and for many years resided on a farm near the homestead. There he labored steadily, assisted in the work by a number of slaves. Among these slaves there was one named Tom, the manumission papers of whom, dated April 28, 1829, are still in

* Edward Fuller, wife Ann, was the 21st signer of the Mayflower Compact. His son Samuel accompanied him to America, and m., April 8, 1635, Jane, daughter of Rev. John Lothrop. Their daughter Hannah, b. 1636, m., Jan. 1, 1658, Nicholas Bonham, and had a daughter, Mary Bonham.

Deacon John Dunham came to America on the second voyage of the Mayflower. His son Benajah had a son, Rev. Edmond, who married the Mary Bonham above mentioned. To this couple was born a son Edmond, Jr., who married Dinah Fitz Randolph; their son Daniel m. Elizabeth Martin, and Sarah Dunham, daughter of Daniel, m. Cornelius Carhart, father of Sarah Carhart, who married Philip Runkle.

existence. By his prudence and ability Mr. Runkle became possessed of considerable property, and finally, feeling himself growing too old for the burdens of active life, he removed from the farm to the village of Stanton, N. J., where his closing years were spent. Both himself and wife are buried in the cemetery near the village mentioned.

As we recall Mr. Runkle, he had a rather long face and prominent features. His figure was tall, spare, and, at the time of which we speak, was bent with the weight of more than four-score years. He was a man of sterling integrity, a true elder brother, and in the community commanded universal respect and esteem. He had one child:

193. i. Catharine

36. MARY, b. March 1, 1795, m. Oct. 17, 1818, James Bird, b. March 6, 1797, died Dec. 13, 1876. Mr. Bird was a farmer, and lived near Bloomsbury, N. J. Mary died July 20, 1872, and both herself and her husband are buried in one of the graveyards of the village near which, for so many years, they had made their home. They had nine children:

194. i. Elizabeth
195. ii. Euphemia Runkle
196. iii. Wesley
197. iv. Catharine W.
198. v. Emily Adeline
199. vi. John Taylor
200. vii. Isabel
201. viii. Mary V.
202. ix. Almira

37. SUSAN, b. Dec. 16, 1796, married, first, Oct. ——, 1820,

John Fisher, b. Aug. 14, 1796. A short time after their marriage they removed to New Germantown, N. J., where Mr. Fisher carried on the business of wheelwright and cabinet-maker. He died of consumption, Aug. 16, 1833. By prudence and economy the widow managed to bring up her little family; and when they were all settled in life, she married, second, Archibald Kennedy, a farmer, living near the village where she resided. Mr. Kennedy was born March 2, 1787, and died Nov. 5, 1857. After his death Mrs. Kennedy made her home with her children. She died Sept. 16, 1875, and is buried in the village cemetery at New Germantown. By her first husband she had three children:

203. i. Frances
204. ii. Jacob Runkle
205. iii. William

38. CATHARINE, b. Jan. 1, 1799, d. Oct. 22, 1874. She married John C. Wert, b. May 27, 1783, d. July 23, 1841. During Mr. Wert's life they resided about midway between Annandale and Clinton, on the Old Turnpike Road. They are both buried in the old Runkle burying-ground on the homestead. They had six children:

206. i. Christiana
207. ii. Euphemia R.
208. iii. Jacob Runkle
209. iv. Eliza P.
210. v. Amanda R.
211. vi. John C.

39. SALLIE, b. Aug. 15, 1800, d. Oct. 1, 1801.

40. JESSE, b. July 18, 1802, d. May 6, 1861. He never married, and is buried at Bloomsbury, N. J.

41. ELIZA, b. April 19, 1804, d. June 3, 1835. She received extra educational advantages; and soon after her return from school she married William R. Prall, b. Sept. 18, 1798, d. Jan. 20, 1878. Mrs. Prall is buried in the Runkle graveyard on the homestead. She had two children:

212. i. Marcy R.
213. ii. Evaline

42. RALPH EDWIN was born in Hunterdon County, N. J., March 31, 1806, where he passed his early youth, receiving such instruction as the school system of that day furnished. His first step in the serious business of life was to undertake learning the trade of a wheelwright in the establishment of his brother-in-law, John Fisher, at New Germantown. This calling he found, on closer acquaintance, was not to his taste. The brain-power and untiring energy that distinguished him later in life began to assert themselves, and urged him into broader and more promising fields. He went to New Orleans, then (by reason of its water communications) the emporium of the rapidly growing West. There he attracted the attention of Colonel John H. Piatt, a wealthy and highly distinguished merchant and banker of Cincinnati. Colonel Piatt was quick to discover merit and to encourage it. Following his advice, young Runkle proceeded to Cincinnati, where he secured employment with the Colonel's brother-in-law, Mr. Granden; and there he made the acquaintance of the Hon. Benj. M. Piatt, at that time one of the judges for Hamilton County, O., and at one time U. S. district attorney for the North-West Territory. Judge Piatt removed to Mac-a-cheek, near West Liberty, Logan County, O.; and there, on Oct. 16, 1829, Mr. Runkle married his eldest daughter, Hannah Isabella, the Judge giving her, as a wedding-present, nearly five hundred acres of beautiful and fertile land on the Mac-a-cheek.

The young couple settled down in West Liberty: Mr. Runkle opening a general store, something like a modern department store on a small scale. He prospered in this business, and in 1837 he erected a comfortable dwelling — indeed quite a mansion for that day — on the farm, whither he removed. He did not, however, confine himself to the routine of farming, but employed a superintendent to look after the crops, while he himself engaged heavily in the stock business—buying and driving hogs to Cincinnati and cattle to New York. By this work he rapidly accumulated capital, took a leading part in all prominent enterprises, and commanded the confidence of all sorts and conditions of men. He introduced better grades of stock, importing the first Durham cattle, and also brought the first Mediterranean wheat into that section. When the question of railroad construction began to be agitated, Mr. Runkle was alive to the importance of its early accomplishment. He gave all his energies to pushing the building of what was then called the Mad River and Lake Erie Railroad, running from Sandusky to Dayton, which was part of the first line connecting the East and West. He was for eight years the president of this pioneer road, which under his administration saw its most prosperous days.

Mr. Runkle lost his first wife by death on May 13, 1839; and on Dec. 2, 1840, he married Eve Eliza Sieg (b. Jan. 24, 1821). After the completion of the railroad through West Liberty, Mr. Runkle (who had invested largely in real estate in the town and vicinity) took up his residence there, and engaged in the grain business, building a large and commodious shipping warehouse. By his manly ways and fair and honest dealings he inspired such universal confidence that he transacted almost the entire business of that section of the country—no competition ever succeeding in making any headway.

Mr. Runkle was a sterling Democrat of the Jackson type. Though his party in that district was in a heavy minority (some thousands), yet in 1852, when the people were called upon to select a member of the State Board of Equalization of Taxes, Mr. Runkle was elected by an overwhelming majority over his Whig opponent, a high and well-deserved tribute to his sterling integrity and great business ability. Mr. Runkle supported the Government during the Civil War, as a War Democrat, liberally with his means and with all the energy of his character. He established the first bank in West Liberty, and passed the latter part of his life in looking after his interests therein. He was a true type of the banker, as he ought to have been, for he made the interests of his customers his own. He counted the character of a borrower as of more worth than his property: the latter he might lose, but the former was eternal. Among his customers were many Dunkards, Omish, and Quakers; and no more touching sight was ever seen in that little maple-shaded village than the gathering of these honest-hearted people, from far and near, when they followed their "friend Ralph," as they were wont to call him, to his last resting-place.

Eve Eliza Sieg Runkle died June 11, 1887; Ralph Edwin had gone before. He died February 15, 1874, and his mortal remains rest on the beautiful hill-top that overlooks the charming valley where he passed so many well-spent years.

Mr. Runkle was a splendid development of pioneer manhood. In him the red blood of a strong race made itself manifest, and in his career obstacles were but the stepping-stones to success. Physically he was the image of the perfect man: six feet two inches in stature, large, and in fine proportion. Wherever he went among men he needed no introduction, for he bore, both in his carriage and countenance, the proof that "an honest man's the noblest work of God." He had six children—three by the first wife, and three by the second:

214. i. Elizabeth Bennett
215. ii. Benjamin Piatt
216. iii. John Oakland Alva
217. iv. Enalla M.
218. v. Lydia S.
219. vi. Henry L.

43. WILLIAM, b. Feb. 24, 1808, d. May 8, 1877. He married, Nov. 22, 1832, Mary F. Parke, b. Feb. 23, 1809, d. June 29, 1886. When eighteen years of age Mr. Runkle went to Easton, Penn., where he engaged in the dry-goods business; later he removed to a farm in the Musconetcong Valley, Warren County, N. J., and later still to a farm in the vicinity of West Liberty, O. On this farm, with the exception of a couple of years, he resided from the time of his going West, about 1847, until 1874, when he removed to Quakertown, Penn., where the remaining years of his life were spent. He is buried in the Presbyterian graveyard at Clinton, N. J.

William Runkle was a tall, fine-looking man, rather slender, and with thick, perfectly white hair, which he wore, as did so many of the Runkles, combed straight back from the forehead and comparatively short. He had eight children:

220. i. Lydia E.
221. ii. Euphemia Ada
222. iii. Mary Matilda
223. iv. Sarah C.
224. v. John E.
225. vi. Jacob
226. vii. William W.
227. viii. Ralph Eugene

44. ABRAHAM, b. June 12, 1810, d. May 26, 1857. He married, Jan. 17, 1833, Mary Jane Stiger, b. April 1, 1811, d. Dec. —, 1862. He was a farmer, and early after his marriage removed to the vicinity of West Liberty, O., and later to Scotland County, Mo., where he died and is buried. He had seven children:

228. i. Jacob
229. ii. Harriet
230. iii. John E.
231. iv. Mary Matilda
232. v. Amanda Ellen
233. vi. Cinderella
234. vii. Florence

45. EUPHEMIA C., b. March 28, 1813, m. Richard J. DeMott, b. July 1, 1811, d. Aug. 26, 1873. Mr. DeMott was a farmer, and resided near Stanton, N. J. Mrs. DeMott was killed at White House Station by being thrown from a carriage, the horses having taken fright at the cars. Her death occurred July 13, 1865. She is buried in the cemetery near Stanton. She had four children:

235. i. John Alexander
236. ii. Jacob Runkle
237. iii. James Oliver

Mrs. Hill's father having died when she was very young, she found a home with her grandfather, John Runkle, whose gentle care and tender kindness awakened in the breast of his orphan grandchild so deep a feeling of reverence and affection that, though seventy years and more have run their course since then, her love for the dear old grandfather remains as strong in its intensity as when, in those days of early childhood, she looked to him for comfort in her sorrows and for sympathy with her joys.

Mrs. Hill now resides with her daughter in Brooklyn, N. Y., and retains, at the ripe old age of eighty-two, a memory as bright as in the hey-day of her youth. We are indebted to her for many reminiscences and anecdotes concerning the Runkles of the long ago, told in a manner so charming and clear that we almost felt that we ourselves had lived among the scenes and had participated in the events so vividly depicted. Mrs. Hill has had three children:

458. i. Francis C.

188. SARAH CARHART, b. July 13, 1816, m. Jacob Besson, b. Aug. 23, 1811, d. Nov. 27, 1890. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Besson resided in Hoboken, N. J., where the latter passed away, Jan. 18, 1896. Both are buried in the Hoboken Cemetery. Even when the shadows of life's closing had begun to gather around her, in the sweet, refined face of Mrs. Besson remained many traces of that beauty for which she was distinguished in her youth. She was a lady of remarkable memory, a good conversationalist, and always exceedingly genial and kind. For much of our information concerning the early members of the Runkle family we are indebted to Mrs. Besson, and the many enjoyable hours spent by us in her society will live in memory among the pleasantest connected with the preparation of this work. She had six children:

664. i. Elbridge Van Syckel
665. ii. A. Josephine
666. iii. S. Louisa
667. iv. James Brower

associate of William Penn and the early Pennsylvania fathers, and his father was General Joseph Hough of that commonwealth. He was a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, in the class of 1847. In 1857 he removed to Rahway, N. J., and during the Civil War was chief surgeon in the 7th New Jersey Volunteers, and was in service over three years. In 1867 and 1868 the doctor was mayor of Rahway, and subsequently, for three terms, was a member of the New Jersey Legislature. Both Dr. and Mrs. Hough are buried at Milford, N. J. She had two children :

678. i. Jennie Cowell
679. ii. Harlan Page

192. JOHN CARHART, b. Dec. 17, 1830, m., first, May 30, 1855, Helen Chichester, b. Nov. 25, 1834, d., in Paris, Jan. 26, 1893. Mr. Runkle was for a long time, and very successfully, engaged in business in New York City, from which he finally retired, and devoted considerable time to foreign travel. After the death of his wife he continued to reside in Paris, where, Sept. 26, 1894, he married, second, Marie Marguerite Gutzwiller, a native of that beautiful city. By his first marriage Mr. Runkle had two children :

680. i. Helen
681. ii. Philip

Child of 35 John E. (Jacob[7], Adam[1])

193. CATHARINE, b. Dec. 22, 1822 (see No. 551), m. Peter F. Hoffman, b. May 16, 1819. Mr. Hoffman is a farmer, and resides near Annandale, N. J., on the farm formerly owned by John Runkle. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman have seven children :

199. JOHN TAYLOR BIRD, b. Aug. 16, 1829, m. June 26, 1854, Ann Elizabeth Hilton, b. Feb. 10, 1829. During his youth Mr. Bird attended the public schools near his home, and later spent three years at a classical academy at Hackettstown, N. J. After the close of school life he studied law under the Hon. A. G. Richey, then residing at Asbury, N. J., and was admitted to the New Jersey bar in November term, 1855. He commenced the practice of law at Bloomsbury, N. J., and in 1863 was appointed prosecutor of the Pleas for Hunterdon County. He then removed to Clinton, and subsequently to Flemington. In 1868 he was elected to Congress by the Democratic party, and in 1870 he was re-elected. In 1882 he was appointed vice-chancellor, to succeed Hon. Amzi Dodd, and in 1889 he was reappointed. His term of office expired in 1896; and he is now engaged in the practice of his profession in Trenton, N. J., where he has resided for a number of years. He has had three children:

717. i. Cora Hilton
718. ii. May Celestine
719. iii. John Warren

200. ISABEL BIRD, b. July 5, 1832, m. Jan. 13, 1858, Sylvester Robbins. Mr. Robbins, when a young man, chose the profession of a teacher; but later he gave it up for the occupation of farming, at which he has been engaged for many years near North Branch, N. J. Mr. Robbins is a most able and enthusiastic mathematician: a branch of education in which, by reason of his rigorous training, his children are also proficient. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins have had seven children:

720. i. Charles Carroll

214. ELIZABETH BENNETT, b. Nov. 5, 1830, d. Aug. 28, 1851.

215. BENJAMIN PIATT, b. Sept. 3, 1836, in West Liberty, O., was educated at Geneva College and Miami University, graduating from the latter, July, 1857. He studied law, and was admitted to the bar, July, 1859. Mr. Runkle was one of the founders of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, which has since become a national organization, having chapters in the leading colleges throughout the United States; and from 1895 to 1897 he served as its national president. He was Democratic candidate for the Ohio State Senate in 1860. On April 14, 1861, Mr. Runkle enlisted in Company "D," 13th Ohio Volunteer Infantry; he was commissioned captain of the company, April 22, and promoted major, 13th O. V. I., Oct. 25, 1861. On the field at Shiloh he was terribly wounded and left for dead: his obituary, written by Hon. Whitelaw Reid, appearing in the "New York Tribune." After his recovery he was promoted lieutenant-colonel, 13th O. V. I., and on Aug. 14, 1862, was commissioned colonel, 45th O. V. I., which regiment he led to the field, after having (during the time his wounds had rendered him unfit for active service) raised and organized the same, largely at his own expense.

Col. Runkle was soon assigned to the command of a brigade of infantry and cavalry, serving in Kentucky and Tennessee, and was thanked for his gallantry on the field, at Somerset, by General Q. A. Gillmore, who gave Colonel Runkle's command entire credit for the victory. He served with Sherman's Army in the Atlanta campaign, and was transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps on "account of wounds received in action," Aug., 1864. July 28, 1866, he was appointed a major of infantry in the regular army of the United States, and was retired "for wounds in line of duty."

Colonel Runkle was brevetted lieutenant-colonel and colonel in the regular army, and major-general in the United States Volunteers, for "gallant and meritorious service during the war," and holds, at the present writing, the rank of major-general.

General Runkle has been twice married: first, on June 4, 1857, to Venitia Reynolds, b. Aug. 9, 1837, by which marriage he had one child; second, Feb. 10, 1894, to Lalla McMicken Lewis, b. Aug. 6, 1848. Mrs. Runkle was a daughter of Andrew McMicken, of Cincinnati, O., and niece of the founder of the University of Cincinnati.

General Runkle is a tall, fine-looking man, with thick gray hair, and a martial bearing which proclaims him the soldier. He is a most eloquent public speaker, and by reason thereof is, from the demands made upon him, frequently compelled to go beyond his strength. While, as we have said, compelled to travel extensively, the general considers Langhorne, Penn., as his home:

249. MARGARET GEARHART, b. Aug. 29, 1814, d. March 2, 1871. In 1839 she married Mordecai William Jackson, b. Jan. 25, 1815, d. July 18, 1894. They are both buried at Berwick, Penn. To Mr. Jackson was largely due the prosperity and growth of Berwick, which was the place of his birth and residence. In 1840, with an associate, he started a small foundry for the manufacture of ploughs, castings, etc. The business from this beginning gradually enlarged, and in 1860 was begun the manufacture of castings for the coal companies and the building of coal and freight cars. In 1867 and 1868 the business was again enlarged by the building of a wheel foundry, and, later, of a pipe foundry, rolling mills and a large company store. When run in full force the works give employment to nearly 1,300 men. In 1872 Mr. Jackson retired from active life, and thereafter his large business interests were carried on by the sons of the firm.

About 1859 Mr. Jackson was elected first superintendent of the Lackawanna & Bloomsburg R. R. (now Bloomsburg Division of the D., L. & W. R. R.). He was also an associate judge of Columbia County, Penn., a trustee of Dickinson College, also of the State Asylum for the Insane at Danville, and was president of the First National Bank of Berwick from the date of its organization, over thirty years ago. As a man, Mr. Jackson was noted for great decision of character, but was distinguished for his considerate and humane treatment of his employees. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was widely known for his interest in all philanthropic causes and for his large benefactions. To Margaret and Mordecai Jackson there were born seven children :

Children of 218 Lydia (Ralph[42], Jacob[7], Adam[1])

763. Ralph Henry Van Deman, b. Sept. 3, 1865, graduated from the High School at Delaware, O., in 1882; then entered Ohio Wesleyan University, which he left at the close of the junior year, 1886, to enter the junior class of Harvard College. After his graduation from Harvard, in June, 1888, he remained a year at home studying medicine with a physician in his native town. He later entered Miami Medical College; but at the close of his second year, an opportunity offering for entering the regular army—a military life always having had for him a strong attraction—he left the Medical College, successfully passed the necessary examinations, was commissioned second lieutenant, and assigned to the 21st Infantry. In May, 1891 (after Lieutenant Runkle's regiment had been ordered East), on recommendation of his commanding officers, he was then given six months' leave of absence for the purpose of completing his medical studies in Cincinnati, which he did, graduating from Miami Medical College in 1892. In the summer of 1893, as a volunteer, he joined the 13th Regiment, then leaving Leavenworth for service in Chicago during the great railroad strike. The summer months of 1895 and 1896 were spent by him in topographical work, and in July, 1897, he was ordered to Washington for work under the Bureau of Military Information. Upon the breaking out of the war with Spain, being then at the head of the National Guard Department, his superior officers refused his repeated applications for leave to join his regiment, then ordered to Tampa. With the completion of his work on the National Guard, he was ordered as one of the mustering officers for the New York volunteers; and at the close of that work, his regiment having departed for Cuba, he accepted a position as aide on the staff of Brigadier-General George B. Davis, of the Second Army Corps, served under him in various camps, and, in December, 1898, went with the general to Cuba, where the latter had been appointed military governor of the province of Pinar del Rio.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RUNKLES.

The different families of the name of Runkle who trace their ancestry back to the early emigrants are principally descendants of those who came to America between the years 1740 and 1750. Among these were Nickel or Nicholas Runckel, who came with Johan in the ship Loyal Judith "from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, Sept. 2, 1743," and Jacob Runckel, who came in the ship Hampshire "from Rotterdam, last from Falmouth, Sept. 17, 1748."

NICHOLAS RUNKLE BRANCH.

I. NICKEL, or NICHOLAS, settled in Bern Township, Berks County, Penn., about ten miles northwest of Reading. The first record that we have of him there is found in the tax list of 1759. A number of years later, on Jan. 18, 1765, he purchased a tract of land from Sabastian Husnrick; on Feb. 19, 1772, a second tract from Thomas and William Penn. He died in 1774, leaving a wife, Elizabeth, and six children, viz.: Jacob, Henry, George, John, Anna, and Maria.

1. JACOB, the eldest son of Nicholas, after the latter's death continued to reside on the homestead farm until 1813, when he also passed away. He had seven children: Jacob, John, William, Mary, Catharine, Elizabeth, and Magdalena. The only one of whom we have a record is Jacob.

   (1) JACOB, b. July 7, 1779, d. Nov. 14, 1860. After the death of his father he removed to Centre County, Penn., where he settled in Penn's Valley. There he owned considerable property, and died about 1858 or 1860, leaving six children: Samuel, John K., Jacob, William, Elizabeth, and Catharine.

a SAMUEL, b. Sept. 10, 1809, d. April 17, 1862. He was a tanner, and had five children: Jacob, John, Samuel, Catharine, and Elizabeth.

b JOHN K., b. March 30, 1813. Lived in Penn Township, Centre County, Penn., where he carried on the occupation of farming. In 1880 he was elected associate judge of Centre County, a position which he held until his death. He died May 15, 1883, at the age of seventy-one years. Mr. Runkle was twice married: first, in 1833, to Catharine Pauley, who died in 1848, and by whom he had five children; second, in 1850, to Lucinda Geary, by whom he had eight children:

JACOB RUNKLE BRANCH.

JACOB RUNKLE, a Palatine, was born in Germany in the year 1721, and when a young man, twenty-seven years of age, left his home for America. Rotterdam, in Holland, was one of the principal Continental seaports in the last century; and it was from that city he took passage on the good ship Hampshire, Thomas Cheesman, master, for Philadelphia. He reached his destination in safety, and, immediately after his arrival, on September 7, 1748, took the oath of allegiance.* It was probably only a short time after reaching this country that he settled in Manheim

* "Names of Foreigners who took the Oath of Allegiance, 1727-1775." Penna. Archives, 2d Series, vol. xvii., pp. 263-4.

Township, York County, Penn., where, a number of years later, by a warrant, dated July 23, 1766, he was granted a tract of one hundred and twenty-five acres of land, "adjoining George Martin, Conrad Gro and others." There he followed the occupation of a farmer until his death, which occurred, most probably, in September or October, 1794. Jacob's will * was made April 14, 1791, and was probated October 24, 1794. His wife, Anna Mary Runkle, died subsequently, at the age of ninety-three years, and is buried in Wildasin's graveyard, near Hanover, Penn., where her husband, most probably, rests beside her. To this couple there were born four children: Ludowick, John, Catharine, and Jacob.

I. LUDOWICK, the eldest son. We know nothing concerning him.

II. JOHN. He married Anna Maria Thoman, b. Jan. 24, 1764, d. June 3, 1842. John Runkle must have died in the latter part of 1790 or early in 1791, as in February of the latter year his widow applied in the Orphans' Court at York, Penn., for the appointment of guardians for her children: Catharine, John, Susanna, and Rebecca.

1. CATHARINE, b. Oct. 23, 1786, d. Oct. 30, 1853. She married John Albright, b. April 2, 1783, d. Aug. 30, 1867. They are both buried in Wildasin's graveyard.

2. JOHN, b. 1788, d. about 1833.

3. SUSANNA, b. 1790; m. Martin Wildasin.

4. REBECCA, b. 1791, m. Daniel Bear.

III. CATHARINE, m. Jacob Behler.

* See Appendix.

IV. JACOB, b. Feb. 3, 1761, m. Catharine Thoman, b. Jan. 6, 1764, d. July 30, 1836. Catharine and Anna Maria, who married John Runkle, were sisters, both being daughters of Jacob and Susanna (Bauman) Thoman.

Jacob Runkle resided on a farm near what is now Marburg P. O., Penn., where he died Feb. 8, 1831. Both he and his wife are buried in the old Windasin's graveyard. He had eleven children, the names of only eight of whom we know:

1. CATHARINE, b. Nov. 1, 1790, d. Aug. —, 1869, was twice married: first, to John Myers, a carpenter, b. ——, 1784, who removed to Manheim Township from Juniata (now Mifflin) County, Penn., and died in 1834; second, to Abraham Bixler. She had five children, all by her first husband:

   (1) SARAH MYERS, m. Jacob Harnish, b. March 11, 1794, d. 1874, and had three children:

      a MARIA HARNISH, m. Eli Mowery.

JOHN RUNKLE BRANCH.

JOHN RUNKLE—the head of another branch of the family, and concerning whom we know nothing more than that he had a sister Margaret, who married in Virginia, and that he himself settled in Pennsylvania—was possibly that John who, on December 24, 1772, landed from the brig Morning Star. Of his children we have the names of four:

1. JOHN, b. ——, 1783 or 1784, d. ——, 1848, m. Lydia Shorts, and removed from Pennsylvania to Indiana, where he settled on the Wabash River near Americus. He had, so far as we have been able to determine, ten children:

1. ABRAHAM, m. Christina Kite, his cousin, and had six children: Sarah, John, Peggy, Martha, Jane, and Michael. (See also Christina, under Peggy Runkle's descendants.)

2. PETER, was twice married: first, in Illinois, where he had removed, to Christina Woods, by whom he had six children; second, to Martha Blair, by whom he had one child:

(1) RUTH ANN, m. her cousin James Allred, and had five children:

Hannah (deceased), Peter, Jane (deceased), Patsy (deceased), and Mary (deceased).

(See also James Allred, under descendants of Patsy Runkle.)

(2) JOHN, m. a Miss Helms, and had four children.

(1) WALTER, m. Elizabeth McQuate, and has four children: James, Samuel, Charles, and Cora.

(2) LIDA, m. Oscar Doney, and has two children: George and Ida.

(3) JENNIE, m. William Bowers, and has one child: Robert.

(4) ANNA, m. George Wallace, and has four children: Eva, Lorma, Nellie, and Alto.

(5) JAMES A., m. Sarah C. Marker. In the Civil War he served in the Union Army, in Company A, 116th Indiana Regiment. In 1866 he went to California, later was mining for a couple of years in Nevada, and is now living on the homestead farm at Colburn, Ind., which he purchased on the death of his father. He has three children: William C., Nevada J., and Goble C.

6. JAMES, m. Martha Hare, and has one child: Elizabeth.

7. PATSY, was twice married: first, to James Oler, by whom she had two children:

(1) JOSEPH.

(2) JOHN.

Second, to James Allred, by whom she had five children:

(3) JAMES. He married Ruth Ann Runkle, and had five children: Hannah (deceased), Peter, Jane (deceased), Patsy (deceased), and Mary (deceased). (See also under Ruth Ann Runkle.)

(4) BENJAMIN. He married and died in Kansas.

(5) LYDIA. She married James Wright, and resides in Uniontown, Kan.

(6) ZACHARIA.

(7) GEORGE; deceased.

From Indiana the family removed to Illinois, and later to the vicinity of Uniontown, Kan.

8. MARY, m. her cousin Isaac Runkle, and had five children: Sarah, Rebecca, Martha, Lydia, and Richard. (See also under Isaac Runkle.)

9. ANNA, m. her cousin, Lewis Runkle, and had four children: Lucinda, Peter, William, and Joseph. (See also under Lewis Runkle.)

10. MARTHA ABIGAIL, m. Reuben Kite, and had one child:

Benjamin.

II. PETER, m. Mary Boundstone, and had a number of children, of whom we have the names of five:

1. LEWIS, m. Anna Runkle, his cousin, and had four children: Lucinda (m. a Mr. Swatts), Peter, William, and Joseph. (See also under Anna Runkle.)

2. ISAAC, m. his cousin Mary Runkle, and had five children: Sarah, Rebecca, Martha, Lydia, and Richard. (See also under Mary Runkle.)

3. LYDIA, m. John Ren, and had one son:

William.

4. DELIA, m. —— Ren, and had three children:

Perry, Joseph, and William.

5. DAVID, m. ——, and had four children: James, Peter, Levi, and Elias.

III. WILLIAM. He lived in Ohio, and had two sons, who removed to Illinois. Their names are not known.

IV. PEGGY, m. Philip Kite. She lived in Tennessee, and had eight children:

Jesse, Lewis, John, Michael, Betsy, Anna, Christina, and Phœbe.

THE NEW YORK RUNKLES.

I. HANCE OR JOHAN RUNKLE, ancestor of one of the New York branches of the family, was possibly that Johan Jost Runckel whom Rupp mentions in his list of emigrants as having, with Jeremias Runckel, come to America, Sept. 15, 1748, on the ship Two Brothers; or he may have been the Johannes Runkel who came over Sept. 9, 1749, in the ship St. Andrew. Which, if either, of the above-mentioned emigrants he was, is entirely surmise; but we do know that shortly after landing he found his way up the Hudson, where he made his home among the Dutch settlers in the vicinity of Albany. As in the New Jersey family, so also among the descendants of this John Runkle is found the persistent tradition concerning the family's Holland origin. Here, too, we find the cause for his leaving the old country assigned to domestic difficulties. It is said that his father's second marriage deeply offended him; and this, coupled with his disappointment at not receiving what he considered his just inheritance, caused him to sever the home ties and to seek in the New World a balm for the vanished expectations in the Old. After remaining in America a short time, he is thought to have returned to the fatherland, and while there to have married. With his bride and a younger brother (whose name is supposed to have been Cornelius) he then bade a final farewell to the home of his youth and left for the distant home of his adoption.

We have no definite information concerning the subject of our sketch after his second arrival in the Colonies until October 11, 1769, when he purchased a farm near Albany, N. Y., at a place called Boght. This farm consisted of two hundred and forty-six acres, and is situated near the present town of Watervliet, eight miles north of the city of Albany and one mile south of the Mohawk River. On this tract, out of the logs cut from the surrounding forests, John Runkle built his primitive home. This humble dwelling, a number of years later, was accidentally destroyed by fire, and with it all the owner's then accumulated savings. A new and better house soon took its place; and there, overlooking the broad acres, cleared and cultivated by his own hard work, the closing years of this Runkle emigrant were spent.

His will is dated April 22, 1791; and his death probably occurred in the latter part of 1803 or early in 1804, as in the latter year the farm was, in accordance with the directions in the will, divided between his two sons.

Concerning the personal appearance and characteristics of this founder of the New York family we have no information. He is buried, as are also his children, in the private graveyard on the old farm; but their graves are marked simply by rough, unlettered brown-stone slabs, from which we can glean nothing concerning the sleepers beneath.

John Runkle had six children: Henry, John, Maria, Elizabeth, Catharine, and Naita.

1. Henry, b. Jan. 22, 1754, d. Nov. 16, 1838. On Nov. 30, 1784, he married Margaret Tooper, and spent his life on that part of the homestead farm which he had inherited from his father. During the Revolution he joined the militia, under Colonel Philip P. Schuyler; but we find no record whether he was ever in active service. In the home of his own childhood his children also grew up to manhood and womanhood, and at his death his eldest son succeeded him. Henry Runkle had seven children: Margaret, John, Sarah, Henry, Christian, Cornelius, and William.

   (1) Margaret, b. Oct. 4, 1785, d. in 1850. She married David Fero, and had two children:

a MARGARET, who m. Christopher Fonda, and also had two children: both married.

b CHRISTIAN, who m. Adelia Stiles, and had four children: two living and two deceased.

(2) JOHN, b. Sept. 11, 1787, d. Jan. 1, 1865. He married Christina Roff, and had four children:

b MARGARET, who m., first, William Reed, by whom she had four children: John Reed (who resides in Albany, N. Y.), George and Michael Reed (who live in Gloversville, N. Y.), and Sarah E. Reed (deceased); second, Matthew Johnston, who resides in Colonie, N. Y.

c GEORGE, resides in Gloversville, and has four children.

d MICHAEL, has a son, John, and both reside at Newtonville, N. Y.

The remaining children—Eliza, William H., Susan, Peter, Maria, and Jesse—are all deceased.

(4) HENRY, b. Jan. 17, 1792, m. in 1819 Elizabeth Van O'Linda. He lived at Boght, near Albany, N. Y., and served in the militia, in the War of 1812, under Colonel Rogers, of Saratoga County. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged, and for his services received a land script for one hundred and sixty acres of land from the Government, also a pension until his death, which occurred Sept. 15, 1881. He had six children:

a HENRY H., b. June 5, 1821, d. Feb. 26, 1873, leaving two children:

a 1 DELMER, b. March 3, 1856, m. Sept. 18, 1898, Mary Rosebrooks, and resides at Hoosic Falls, N. Y.

a 2 ELLA, b. Aug. 30, 1866, m. May 9, 1893, Charles C. Gibson, and also resides at Hoosic Falls, N. Y.

b ELEANOR, b. Jan. 10, 1824.

c JOHN, b. Aug. 28, 1826.

d MARGARET, b. Feb. 19, 1831, d. April 24, 1891.

e MARIA A., b. July 17, 1833, d. Dec. 13, 1898. Miss Runkle was born and spent the early years of her life at Boght, N. Y., where she became a member of the Reformed Church. For the past twelve years, with the exception of a few months preceding her death, she had resided at Cohoes, N. Y. She passed away at Northside, N. Y., and was laid to rest in the Albany Rural Cemetery.

The lively interest felt by Miss Runkle in all that pertained to the history of her family, together with her kind, womanly letters, caused the writer to consider her as a dear relative and friend. The pleasure, therefore, which he naturally feels over the completion of his work is not untinged with sadness as he thinks of that record of a lovely Christian life which so nearly at the same time was closed forever.

f SARAH, b. Feb. 17, 1836. She resides at Cohoes, N. Y., where for many years she was identified with the educational interests of the town.

(5) CHRISTIAN, b. Sept. 10, 1796, d. in 1835. He married Anne Van Denbergh, and had five children:

a ABRAM. He lives in Michigan, and has had two children (both deceased).

b ISAAC. He lives in Ashtabula, O., and has three daughters.

c MARGARET. She married Philip Perigo, and also lives in Ashtabula, O.

d JACOB; died young.

e HENRY. He resides in Albany, N. Y., and has one son: Marshall.

(6) CORNELIUS, b. July 6, 1799, d. in 1881. He married, first, Jane Fonda, by whom he had four children: Maria A., Margaret, Sarah, Isaac; second, Maria Youngs, by whom he had five children: Frank, Malvin, Jane, Henrietta, and Ida.

a WILLIAM H., a physician. He resided near Cincinnati, O., and had two children. He is now deceased.

b MARY ELIZABETH; deceased.

c CHESTERFIELD; deceased.

d ANNA, m. Thomas Liddle. Resides at Amsterdam, N. Y., and has had three children: Dr. William A. (who died in 1894, at the age of twenty-nine), and two daughters (who are still living).

2. JOHN, second child of the emigrant, was born March 28, 1756, and, like his brother, belonged during the Revolution to the militia. He married, April 16, 1796, Helena Van Woert, and, after the death of his father, built and resided on that portion of the homestead farm which, in the division thereof, was allotted to him; and there, Feb. 17, 1813, he died. He had six children:

(1) ELIZABETH, b. Nov. 14, 1797. She never married.

(2) JOHN, b. Oct. 1, 1800, was twice married: first, to Mary Harrington, by whom he had four children: Elizabeth, Margaret and Sarah (who were twins), and John; second, to Fannie Van Patten, by whom he had one daughter: Kate. He removed to Illinois in 1834, where he died in 1890.

a JOHN DANIEL, b. Oct. 11, 1822, m., first, in 1851, Sarah Willard Hodges, who died in 1856, leaving no children; second, in 1862, Catharine Robbins Bird, who died Feb. 24, 1897. In his boyhood Mr. Runkle attended the district schools, and when a young man, in 1848, entered Lawrence Scientific School. In 1849, through the influence of Professor Pierce, he received a position on the "American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac." With this publication he was connected until 1884. In the year 1855 he published, in the Smithsonian "Contributions to Knowledge," a set of astronomical tables. When the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Boston, was started in 1865, Mr. Runkle accepted the position of professor of mathematics. In 1868 he was appointed acting president and in 1870 president of the Institute. Two year later, in 1872, he established the Lowell School of Practical Design. Professor Runkle continued at the head of the Institute of Technology until the year 1878, when he resigned the presidency, and spent the two succeeding years in European travel. Upon his return to America he resumed his old position as professor of mathematics in the Institute, which chair he still occupies.

Professor Runkle received the degrees of B. S. and A. M. from Harvard College in 1851, that of Ph.D. from Hamilton College in 1869, and of LL.D. from Wesleyan University in 1871. As a mathematician he is considered one of the foremost in the country, and in every respect represents an able, well-rounded type of American manhood. By his second wife Professor Runkle had six children:

Dec. 23, 1869, Lucia Gilbert Calhoun, a lady of high literary attainments, who has contributed many articles to the daily press, the "Century Magazine," and "Harper's Weekly." Mr. Runkle studied law in Albany, N. Y., and afterward graduated from the Harvard Law School. Upon being admitted to the bar he entered the office of Kent, Eaton & Davis (Chancellor Kent, Dorman B. Eaton, and J. Bancroft Davis); and later, in 1858, he went into partnership with George Douglas, a brother of Dr. Douglas, who was General Grant's physician. At the close of the war Mr. Runkle became deputy collector of customs, having charge of the law division. He was an intimate friend of Horace Greeley, and for twenty years was the attorney for the "Tribune."

In the famous Marie-Garrison suit, in which $4,000,000 were involved, he was counsel for Commodore Garrison. Mr. Runkle appeared very seldom in court, however, his being mainly office work. He died March 19, 1888, leaving one child: Bertha.

THE VIRGINIA RUNKLES.

While we feel assured that all those of the name of Runkle living in Virginia, or whose fathers went from there to the great West, are of the same stock, yet we have, from the fragmentary character of our information, found it impossible to connect these different families with any degree of certainty with the common ancestor.

Peter Runkle came from Germany at an early day, and upon his arrival settled down among the German Swiss in that part of Eastern Virginia embraced within the limits of what is now Culpeper County. From there, following closely the advance of civilization, he was among the first of the white settlers who, crossing the Blue Ridge, subsequently made their home in the Valley of Virginia. The subject of this sketch purchased a large tract of land near what is now Antelope Post-Office, in Rockingham County, Va., and there the remainder of his days were spent.

It is most probable that Peter Runkle had a number of children, among whom were Peter, Jacob, and most probably Margaret and Lewis.

1. PETER lived at East Point, Rockingham County, Va., where he married Margaret Cook, and had five children: Catharine, Peggy, and two other daughters (whose Christian names we do not know), and a son: Jacob. He is buried at Peter's Church, Va.:

1. CATHARINE, m. Jacob Bear, and had five children:

Jacob, Adam, John, Wesley, and Rebecca.

2. MARGARET (PEGGY), m. Isaac Sellers, and had no children.

3. ——, m. Dr. Joseph Wolf.

4. JACOB. He lived at East Point, Va., and married Elizabeth Fye, who died Feb. 13, 1849, by whom he had eleven children. Of these children four, two boys and two girls, were of immense size, their aggregate weight being sixteen hundred pounds. He died Sept. 29, 1851, and is buried in John Coot's graveyard near East Point:

(1) NANCY, b. April 4, 1812, d. Jan. 4, 1856, unmarried.

(2) SUSANNA, b. Sept. 27, 1813; deceased. She married Solomon Martze, and has one son:

N 'KEY' 55 YEARS AS STATION AGENT

ioan Runs Store, Writes for Newspaper and Has Other Jobs, Too.

(Plain Dealer Special)

JRBANA, O., April 13.—Darius nkle, veteran railroader, has been the job in the same little Erie tion at Mingo, near here, for the t 55 years.

n this little village of 200 persons, has been ticket agent, freight ent, baggage master and telegraph erator, all in one, for more than alf century.

But that is not all. He has had ne to teach 65 boys the art of telegphy, to manage the village's ding dry goods store, to be postster and to write a weekly news ter to the Urbana Daily Citizen.

Runkle was born on a farm in ngo Valley, named after that tribe Indians, which once lived in that ality. He grew to manhood and was his father's wish that he be dry goods merchant.

Two Years Without Pay.

He worked in the dry goods store Mingo, but did not like it and deed to become a telegraph operator. s father paid the station agent at ngo $6 a month for nine months teach him telegraphy.

The boy mastered the Morse code, t had to work a year longer before re was a position open for him. ring all of that time he received pay.

The Mingo agent was transferred Marion and the boy, then 21, who d worked for two years without y, was made agent. That was in tober of 1874. He has been Erie ent in Mingo since.

Runkle takes a lot of pride in the boys he taught and he says that every one of them has made good.

Secretary to Will Hays.

But one of those boys is his favorite and Runkle likes to tell how he still gets letters from Kirk Russell in New York City and how Russell says that if the veteran railroader had not given him the right start, the younger man would still be in Mingo, digging ditches.

Russell is private secretary to Will Hays, former postmaster general and now a powerful figure in the movie industry.

As Runkle sat in his blanket-draped chair in his office, he proudly told of the meeting of Erie trainmen which he attended a short time ago. He is the second oldest employe in the Erie clerical service and some of the veterans were called upon for short talks.

"I was ready to talk to those fellows. And I talked to them just twelve minutes. I said:

"'I know just what you are all thinking about. You are wondering why I stayed in the little town of Mingo for so many years.'

"And I told them why I had stayed there. I told them it was the best town in the United States to live in. You know, when I got through my boss told me I had proved my point.

He Studied Law.

"When I first started to work for the company I used to study law in my spare time and I turned up many a dollar helping out my friends in the magistrate's court here.

"Sometimes I have been sorry that I didn't continue my studies. In those days they had a lot of litigation. People always wanted to go to law.

"But I had to drop my law studies. I bought out the dry goods store here and ran the postoffice with my wife's help for twelve years, in addition to my work at the station.

"It was too much work and I had to drop the law, but sometimes I think I might have been a pretty good lawyer because I liked to plead my cases in the magistrate's court."

The 5:06 eastbound train drew up to the little station and the agent ran out to get the freight. The train stopped just one minute to permit the delivery of three small boxes and then went on.

The agent came back to his office and said:

"You know, this station has a mighty interesting history. It was the Erie station in Urbana in 1867 and was moved here in 1889. It has never been changed. When it was over there, a Methodist preacher used to hold services in the waiting room. The railroad officials gave him permission to use the room because he had no church.

Man of Many Jobs Prefers Small Town

"That reminds me of how I started to write news letters to the Champaign Democrat at Urbana in 1874.

"With several friends, I went to a farm festival at North Lewisburg and when we got there, we cut up a lot and had a good deal of fun. A reporter for the paper saw us and he wrote a story about the boys from Mingo, who got drunk at the festival.

"It made me mad because we hadn't had a thing to drink. I wrote a letter to the paper and they printed it. After that I used to send in some little item and they finally asked me to write for them.

"I have been sending in items ever since.

Why He Doesn't Retire.

"Lots of folks come here to the station and say: 'Mr. Runkle, you have worked here a long time; you don t have to work any more; you have a nice little farm. Why don't you quit?' But I couldn't do that; this is my business. I can't do anything else."

The agent got out of his chair to throw a switch.

"Sit still, I want to throw this lever back for that freight train coming up the hill," he said.

"Lots of railroaders ask me why I never went to any other station and I have to tell them all about it. I'll tell you just like I tell them.

"My wife was a Mingo girl and the only child and it was only natural that her father and mother should want her to stay here. I was a frail boy then, and the doctors said I could never live to be 40.

"And then, lots of times, when I went on excursions and to conventions, I would talk to the other men who worked in larger stations. I found out that they all got more money than I did but that I usually saved more than they did.

"Most of the time I made about $50 a month, but I had a little house, which I bought with my savings, and I had a cow and a lot of chickens. I thought that was about all any man could ask for.

"There are a lot of things that I am proud of and one of them is that the company never had to call me on the carpet. Why, the last time the auditor was here, he found that the Erie owed me three cents.

"How long will I work here? Well, that's pretty hard to tell. My eyes are not as good as they used to be and they might cause me trouble the next time I take the test.

"I'm sorry you have to go. Come back and see me again."

Judge Studies Paternity Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A judge has taken under submission a paternity suit brought against singer Johnny Johnston by a 24-year-old show girl.

Superior Judge Clarence B. Runkle said he would study depositions from witnesses when the four-day trial ended Friday. Miss Betty Bowers, of Washington, D.C., claims Johnston is the father of her 11-month-old daughter, Dana Elizabeth. She asks support for the child. Johnston has denied any misconduct with Miss Bowers.

A Frenchman reached Michigan's upper peninsula in 1618, two years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

Findlay; Mrs. Robert McBeth, Plymouth, the Misses Edith and Murchie Castanien at home; Clarence, of Upper Sandusky, and Fred Castanien, residing on the Castanien homestead in Pitt township, Wyandot county.

The family makes a definite effort to have a reunion at least once each year, sometimes a summertime outing at a park or the Pitt township homestead, or as was the case this year, at the home of the parents for the observance of some special day.

William H. Castanien and Anna Dirmeyer were united in marriage in Upper Sandusky, Dec. 23, 1890. They set up housekeeping in a two room log cabin on the heavily wooded farm in Pitt township that was homestreaded by Mr. Castanien's parents.

A few years later they constructed a larger farme house on the farm and there they reared their family. During the childhood years of the five boys and six girls they regularly seated 13 at the dinner table.

Table supplies, outside the diversified production of the family farm, were often purchased in barrel lots from mail order houses of the era. A major item of the barrel lot purchases for the family was sugar, used in canning and preserving and the making of quantities of jams and jelly.

Mrs. Castanien recalls the long winter evenings when the children were all home and would go to the pit in the garden and dig out apples to eat.

Mr. Castanien also recalled another type of pit often used in the early years on the farm. A long and sloping trench baited with a trail of corn and covered with fence rails and chicken netting served as a turkey trap and netted the family a frequent winter feast of wild turkey. The birds would walk into the trench following the trail of corn, but always tried to fly out through the netting. Few of the birds ever escaped the pioneer-type traps.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Castanien are enjoying good health as they mark their 63rd anniversary. She is active in the housework, maintaining the large home and its tourist rooms with the aid of her two daughters at home. Mr. Castanien enjoys gardening in the summer and takes a daily walk each afternoon, the year around, to the office of the local daily newspaper for his copy of the afternoon edition.
